

Wilson And Tarboro Play Golf Here Wednesday

First Triangular Match Of Season For Course

Wilson and Tarboro Rate at Top of League With Wilson Defending Champions; Other Matches of Day Announced.

West End Country Club's golf team will be host Wednesday to Wilson and Tarboro in a triangular match in the first of the season for the Wilson and Tarboro Association.

Wednesday's match will be the first of the season for the Wilson and Tarboro Association. The match will be played on the West End Country Club's golf course.

Play at the local club has been on temporary grounds for the past two weeks, and the permanent large grass greens are now at their best for play.

O. T. Kinsland is captain of the Henderson team and is urging all local golfers to turn out to meet the visitors.

Last week, Henderson was licked in Wilson by last year's champions of the association.

Turner, Westerner, paced Henderson in last week's match, carding a 77. Billie Barnes and Bill Bridges were the best for Wilson, with 71's and 74's respectively.

Other matches of the day will be played at the club between the Henderson and the local club.

Two Girls Teams To Play Softball

One of the feature attractions of the all-star softball tournament for the weekend will be a game between two very good girls teams. It is announced that this contest will get underway at 4 o'clock with the all-star team playing later in the evening.

Mary Florence Houghaling is captain of a Henderson outfit, and Mary L. Norwood will bring her townsville team here for the contest.

Players on the Henderson team are Helen Lowry, Margaret Falkner, Maxine Barker, Connie Hilliard, Minnie Hughes, Helen Parrish, Dennis Darrish, Agnes Baskett, Madeline Johnson, Helen Miller, Ruth Robinson, Rose Lowry and Mary F. Houghaling.

The townsville team is composed of L. Norwood, E. Moss, R. Moss, Antfielders, G. Norwood, shortfielders, M. Edwards, H. Wiggins, N. Hunt and D. Hunt (infielders). D. Hunt also does part of the pitching.

The all-star games will precede the opening of the loop by one night.

Busy Week Is Ahead State

Raleigh, April 28.—Two engagements with Wake Forest on which a lot will depend as regards the Wake County championships in a couple of sports headline the next sports week for Wake County State teams.

One is an addition to the schedule—a track meet to be run off between the two teams at 4 p. m. Wednesday. The other is a rearranged varsity football game, originally announced for Saturday but now scheduled for Thursday in Wake Forest.

Wake and State haven't met in a regular track meet since the 1936 after a 1936 in seven years. However, an impromptu meet was run off between the two in 38, and the two teams are engaged in the same event.

State will be out to make amends in some way for the 1936 pasting which on its base, after Easter Monday when the two Wake county rivals met in this section's annual football classic, and Coach Williams (Doc) Newton is expected to be gunning with both barrels in an effort to even the series.

pit the freshman tennis teams against each other, also Thursday. The same afternoon the varsity will engage the Duke racquet welders.

Other items due for settlement are the varsity's baseball game with McEwen in Burlington and the freshmen meet with Carolina in Chapel Hill Monday and the two frosh baseball battles—Friday with Lenoir College in Lenoir and Saturday with North Carolina here.

PRACTICE GAMES AT SOFTBALL DIAMOND

There will be two games tonight and two Tuesday night at the softball diamond at the fairgrounds. It is announced.

Two girls teams will play tonight with the Goo-Ameo and the Home Guard taking the field for a nightcap.

Tuesday, Western Auto plays Wake Forest.

These contests are practice games, and have no bearing on the league, which opens Thursday evening.

SCHOLARSHIPS AT VIRGINIA COLLEGE

Dayton, Va., April 28.—Thirty-five hundred dollars in scholarships will be awarded by Shenandoah College.

The examinations will consist of standard scholarship, aptitude, and achievement tests, in the conservatory, the contestants will be given an applied music portion in addition to other tests. Application blanks may be secured from high school principals or by writing to the college.

All contestants will be guests of the college for the week, including the May weekend, and the band concert.

It is probably as much inequality of experience at least as much as class suspicion which makes it hard for an employer to make his point of view intelligible to his workmen, and vice versa.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE
NATALIE DREW a hard breath when Brooks said it was murder.

"The police, of course," she said quietly. Her hand slid into Brooks' which closed hard over it, and she gave him a little smile.

"Sorry I can't call the police," Tom said, "but of course you all know that there are no telephone connections on the island. I'll have to take the speedboat to the mainland. Or, if you prefer, we'll draw lots to see who goes."

"Not at all, old fellow," said the major. "You are in charge here. Naturally, you are the one to report this—most regrettable occurrence."

Tom nodded and turned toward the small boat at the end of the pier. "I'll make it as fast as I can," he called over his shoulder, and went running down the pier.

The others watched him as he bent to the door of the boat. He shoved open the door and then stood still for a moment, staring into the depths of the boat. He turned and motioned to them.

"Now what—" said Brooks under his breath as they ran down the pier to where Tom was standing.

"The boat's gone," said Tom. There was a queer, startled expression on his face. "The lock has been forced."

"Then that means we have no way of getting to the mainland—of communicating with the police?" said the major.

"That's right," said Tom. "But surely we could rig up a signal," said Brooks sharply.

WeeklyMarket News Review

Raleigh, April 28.—Feed markets were generally dull during the past week. The demand slackened following a more active inquiry early in the month and prices tended downward, according to the U. S. and North Carolina Departments of Agriculture in the weekly market news service review.

Offering of most feeds were also more plentiful as producers began to cater up on earlier orders. Mixed feed manufacturers and dealers were generally purchasing in limited quantities for current needs. The index number of wholesale feed-stuff prices declined about 2 points to 111.7 compared with 113.9 for the previous week and 125.6 for the corresponding week last year.

The market for farmers' stock peanuts in the Virginia-North Carolina area is firm but little changed from a week ago. At present best juniors bring 4 cents and occasionally 4.15 cents per pound and best shelling stock around 3 1/2 to 4 cents per pound. Meanwhile, stocks of peanuts in the hands of farmers are getting extremely light, but sales of peanuts for edible use by the Virginia-North Carolina cooperative have also been light during the past week or two.

In Chicago fed steers and yearlings declined 25 to 50 cents early in the period but came back later to finish ready to 25 cents lower when compared with the previous weeks.

Hogs encountered a slow market all week but net changes were narrow, and closing quotations ready to 20 cents lower for the week on butchers. Sharply increased receipts of fed woolled western lambs resulted in a 15 to 30 cent lower market on this class.

Good quality eggs were scarce in the Raleigh area and farm prices advanced from 1 to 3 cents per dozen during the week. Paying prices for live poultry weakened 1-2 cent per pound but other classes held steady. At the close candled and graded U. S. Extras large white eggs commanded 25 cents per dozen and nearby ungraded hennessy whites from 19 to 21 cents. Colored fryers were eligible for 17 1/2 cents per pound and colored hens for 15 and 16 cents.

With pastures in the major butter areas not yet in an advance stage, creamery butter production for the week ending April 10 was only 1 per cent higher than in the preceding week. Compared with a year earlier, however, production was 7 per cent higher.

Cotton prices declined moderately during the week, spot market activity decreased. Reported repossessions of loan cotton were about 73,000 bales for the seven days ended April 22. Export buying was again negligible and domestic mill buying slackened further. Domestic mills continued to operate at an annual rate of more than 10,000,000 bales although consumption for the 1940-41 season is expected to fall short of this figure by about half a million bales. Mill sales of cloth and yarn were moderate but larger in volume than in the previous week.

State Still Imports Eggs

Daily Dispatch Bureau, In the Sir Walter Hotel, By LYNN NISBET.

Raleigh, April 28.—Although the poultry yard in North Carolina boosted production of eggs during the first three months of this year, they still didn't do a good enough job to give every citizen one egg a day.

Egg production in the state for January, February and March was 191,000,000, according to W. T. Weston, junior statistician in the department of agriculture. This was an increase over the same period last year of about 11 per cent. Incidentally, North Carolina was the only South Atlantic state in which the hens improved their record.

Dividing the 191,000,000 eggs by the three and a half million people shows that our home state hens produced 54 eggs for each person during the 90-day period. Considering the fact that lots of us took the second egg with the ham or bacon at breakfast there is no wonder that many carloads of eggs had to be shipped into the state—and still some felloes didn't get their quota.

The number of layers doing business in March was estimated at 6,500,000, a slight increase over the year before. Not only did the hens lay more eggs, but farmers and poultrymen were able to get better prices for what they sold, the estimated increase being 12 per cent as of March 15. Prices of chickens also was a little higher this spring than last.

Percentage makes hens do funny things. You'd hardly think a hen could lay a part of an egg, but statistics prove it. During March each hen laid 12.29 eggs, while in February the average was 3.6 eggs apiece.

roast. You'll find half a dozen bonfires all up and down the mainland beach any night, for that purpose," said Tom.

"Then what you're trying to say is that there is nothing for us to do, but just sit here," said Brooks.

"I'm afraid I can't see anything else that we can do—"

"Of course, the obvious fact is that someone has a reason for wanting to keep us here. Is that the way you look at it, Forman?" suggested the major.

Tom shot him a swift, silencing glance that was lost in the rapidly gathering gloom. "Why, no, Major, I don't think so. I think merely that we have been victims of a clever thief who needed a boat and some supplies."

"Supplies? Then you've missed supplies, too?" Lucy cut in unexpectedly.

Tom turned to her, startled. "Too?" he repeated, frowning a little.

"When we got home last night from your place, our ice box had been looted of practically everything. Only the canned stuff in the pantry, locked up inside the house, was left," answered Lucy.

Tom's heart sank.

"That man last night at the window—and now the dead man—and the theft of the boat and supplies?" mused the major, obviously thinking aloud. "It all adds up—perhaps a couple of fugitives from the law—an argument, a fight, one of them dead, the other making his escape by means of the boat. Yes, it all adds up."

Through the growing dusk he and Tom exchanged significant glances and Tom took his cue from the older man.

"I'm afraid you're right, Major," he said then. "Well, we've nothing to gain by standing here in the dark. We must let Heath know what's happened. And then—I don't suppose there's anything to be done but to make ourselves as comfortable as we can for the night. In the morning we'll have to rig up some sort of message to the mainland."

"Quite," said the major crisply. "And I don't want to alarm you ladies, but I'd feel much more comfortable about you if you were all inside the Hacienda. This darkness isn't exactly the safest place, I'd say—"

They all turned toward the Hacienda, stumbling a little in the darkness. As they reached the low green gate that opened into the patio, Tom said, "I'll go, and tell
