ALADDIN IS HERO OF NEW PAGEANT

Gifts of the Genie Are Rivaled in Costuming of Barnum & Bailey Opening Feature.

A new pageant, said to be something on a larger scale and more elaborately costumed than anything before attempted under canvas, will be the opening feature of the Barnum & Bailey circus to be shown here June 21.

"Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" is the title and, according to advance reports, it is as colorful as the Chinese locale suggests and as spectacular as the narrative of supernatural wonder might be imagined. More than one thousand persons take part in the presentation of the fairy story and all of the horses, camels and elephants of the big circus are effectively used in the processions which precede and follow the big scene. The wedding of Aladdin and the Princess Badroul-bourour is enacted in the centre of the circus arena where it can be seen from every seat. The setting for this scene is described as a blending of color and symbolic effects that departs from historic exactness only on the side of beauty.

In preparation for five years, the new pageant has costumes of silks, satins, brocades and hand-made embroideries that were made by Chinese workers in their native land and fashioned according to the dress of the day when the genie was at the beck and call of the boy who, through his possession of the magic lamp, gained countless riches and the hand of the fairest princess of his land. Each of the actors in the pageant is provided with various costumes to fit the portrayal of important incidents in the life of Aladdin. The animals are robed in hand-made coverings of extraordinary beauty.

Elaborate as the pageant is, it is promised that it has been permitted to take away nothing from the program of "regular" circus events which follows. For more than two hours there will be presented in all of the spaces of the vast enclosure, trick after trick and "stunt" after "stunt" to make the onlooker wish for a dozen pairs of eyes. There are new acts in rings, on stages and high in the rigging above the heads of the audience and in the hippodrome there will cavort an augmented army of clowns with a thousand and one of tricks to create such laughter as can be heard only when clowns come to town with the big circus. There are 60 of the funny fellows this year—more than ever before.

The menagerie has been increased in size by the birth during the winter period of hibernation of a dozen baby animals. Those who enjoy the cunning antics of the children of the wild should pay particular attention to the lion, leopard and kangaroo cages and to the stalls of the camels and giraffes.

LITTLE INTEREST IN PRIMARIES

Not a great deal of interest was manifested in the Republican primaries which were held last evening in the various districts of the city. The delegates chosen have the privilege of voting in the town and city convention which will be held on Saturday evening at Republican headquarters for delegates to the state, congressional and county conventions to be held within the next three weeks.

Delegates elected were as follows: First district, 34 Court street, 43 voters, F. A. Bartlett, John J. Hines and Charles Cole. Second district, 55 Gregory street, 22 voters, John T. King, Andrew J. Northey and Robert A. McBride. Third district, 2790 Fairfield avenue, 19 voters, James T. Reynolds, Thomas C. Johnson and Michael Kosma. Fourth district, 185 Colorado avenue, 26 voters, John A. Leonard,

James A. Turner and John L. Lyons. Fifth district, 611 Norman street, 16 voters, Robert N. Blakeslee, Alexander M. Baker and John H. Carter. Sixth district, 1173 North avenue, 96 voters, T. J. Connor, George Four and Tracy Wendell. Seventh district, 176 Fairfield avenue, 12 voters, Edward Hamilton, Lawrence Finkelstone and Paul P. O'Ellia. Eighth district, 168 Thompson street, 64 voters, Frederick R. Canfield, Frank P. Fasanella and John M. O'Connell. Ninth district, 1073 East Main street, 22 voters, Fred A. Brill, Albert L. Brown and John Platy. Tenth district, 927 East Main street, 15 voters, Edward Seery, Charles L. Dennis and Frank Kisco. Eleventh district, 290 East Main street, 35 voters, William H. Brown, Frank E. Elliott and Florindo Farace. Twelfth district, 283 Central avenue, 31 voters, Arthur Brown, John Y. Caldwell and Robert Nichols.
