LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

By LEE PAPE

Some man was standing on the corner yesterday afternoon giving out little sample bottles of cologne to whoever went past, so I went past and he gave me one, being such good cologne could smell it all the way through the cork, and I went around the block and came back and went past him again with my cap pulled away down for a distance, and he handed me another bottle, and I went around the block again and started to go past him with my cap on backward, and the man said, "Wat, you still, agent?" Meaning he had saw thro' my disguise the first time, and he wouldn't give me any more, and I went home with the 2 bottles of cologne, thinking, "G. I. know, I'll put some on me and go around and let Mary Watkins smell it."

And I took the cork out of one bottle and sprinkled all the cologne on my hair and clothes, not being much of it but smelling as if there was a lot more, me thinking, "Maybe I better put the other bottle on for good measure."

Which I did, and I went around to Mary Watkins house and Mary Watkins was sitting on the front steps, and I sat down alongside of her without saying anything about the cologne, and she didn't say anything and I sat closer on account of thinking maybe it didn't reach that far, and she kept on not saying anything, so I sat still closer, and she said, "We don't you push me off the steps will you about it?"

Me not saying anything, and after a while I said, "Do you smell anything?"

War Bureau Points Out Need of Bridgeport Factories to Increase Output

LABOR SHORTAGE IS NOW 10,000 EMPLOYEES

Not to Take Places of Men But to Increase Munitions Necessary for Victory.

To the Women of Bridgeport:

The United States officials and the manufacturers of Bridgeport, after canvassing the local situation thoroughly, have reached the conclusion that there is a shortage of labor in our factories of at least 10,000 hands.

Since 80 per cent. of our factories produce the production of all of our factories relates to munitions, the output of our factories is absolutely essential to the supplying of our Army and Navy with that constant stream of supplies and equipment upon which our success in this war depends.

Our government proposes in 1919 to have an army in the field of 4,800,000 men. That will take from two to three times the number of men we already have in the Army. That means that the manpower of Bridgeport will diminish by as much as the new drafts take.

With the increased Army our country will need greatly increased armament equipments and supplies, and Bridgeport must increase her output greatly. We shall need probably from 20,000 to 30,000 additional hands in our factories.

We cannot supply these in any very appreciable degree from the man power of the country for the drain of men in every section is about equal.

We must get this help from our women. Those who are unemployed must join that great army of patriotic women who all over the country are going to work largely in essential industries because their country calls them.

The women of England and France heard the call and they rushed to the colors. It is estimated that fully 6,000,000 women in the kingdom of Great Britain are engaged in whole time work, most of which is essential to the war.

In three years 621,000 women were added to the payrolls of England's munition factories.

One of the eminent publicists of England only recently said, "The spirit in which these women have come forward to take the place of men is beyond praise. They have been a steady influence in trade disputes. They have shown the utmost courage in moments of danger or panic. Many of them are doing either exceedingly hard work or extremely monotonous work. Their physical endurance has equalled their powers of nervous resistance to disease. Their morality has been superior to that of men."

This is a very modest tribute to the work of the women of England in this war. Had the women of England and France not taken up this work which the men had left when they went to the front the war would have ended long before America entered it.

What the women of England and France did our women will do. I believe there are few places in the United States where the men and women are more ardent in their patriotism than in Bridgeport.

Wherever we see German ascendancy would place the women of the world where she was generations ago, and the tales of German atrocities and their unspeakable acts of cruelty have awakened our women to the fighting edge.

The women of our country and indeed the men of this generation never before knew the meaning of patriotism and love of country. It has come over them in these late days with overwhelming force that this great conflict down at bottom was to decide whether justice and mercy and love should still rule in this world.

The women of the country and especially in Bridgeport have done wonderful work in all sorts of war activities. Those of us who have been so fortunate as to be in a place where we could witness this work have marvelled at the capacity, the efficiency, the patient endurance and the unflinching enthusiasm of our women.

I have no doubt the women of Bridgeport who are unemployed and who can, will go in our industries and do their best.

And I have no doubt that thousands of our women who can give three or four hours a day will go in our industries and give part time.

Many of our factories can arrange for these part time women and in this way the wheels of our industries will be kept going.

It must be understood that it will frequently occur that a woman by going in much by going in essential industries. She may thus release other labor to go in direct munition work or a man to go to the colors.

All of our industries must be kept working to the limit of the demand, for in this way only can the community be kept prosperous and hence contented, and as our communities and all other communities of the country are prosperous those who prosper can and will support the government and help pay the stupendous cost of this war to us.

One other thing should be noted. The purpose of securing women help in munition making and in non-essential industries is not to displace men but to supply the vacant place which cannot be filled by men because those who could have filled the places are abroad, fighting our battles. General March says we have one and three-quarters million of men abroad. They heartened the French and British troops and our victories had their initiative with them and they have forced Germany to begin her antique peace drive. They are on the way to the iron mines of Briey and to the fortress of Metz. They want our guns, our small arms, our ammunition and our supplies, and they ask our women to make them for them. Women of Bridgeport will you do it?

In order to know just how many women are ready to work and what vocations our women have had experience in, a census or registration of all the women in Bridgeport, between the ages of 18 to 60 will be taken on Tuesday next.

This registration will be made by the Minute Women of Bridgeport. One or more of these women will call upon you and secure your answer to a few simple questions and your answers will be recorded upon a card. We shall expect every woman to assist the Minute Woman who calls upon her, by answering freely and speedily the questions asked. These questions have been approved by the Government officials and by us. We have instructed the Minute Women to keep a record of all women who either refuse to answer or answer only in part and report this to us. We shall consider such conduct disloyal.

Chairman, Executive Committee.

STUDENTS MAY ENROLL IN THE NAVAL UNITS

Washington, Sept. 23.—Naval units or naval sections of the student army training corps are to be established at universities and colleges in thirty-seven states and the District of Columbia. In announcing them the navy department said students subject to draft may enroll in the naval units or sections by applying, before October 1, to naval representatives at the institutions.

Students admitted will be allowed active duty pay and will be enrolled in the naval force as apprentice seamen. The students must make their own arrangements with the institutions with regard to board, lodging and tuition, as under the agreement between the war and navy departments the latter will not enter into any contracts with the schools as the war department has done in the case of institutions having sections of U. S. students army training corps.

Naval sections of the student army training camp having a naval officer as commandant will be known as naval units, but at institutions where there is no naval officer commandant, the navy sections will be under the commandant of the student army training corps.

Members of the naval units and sections will, after a certain period, be selected according to their performance and assigned to naval training in a training camp.
