Two women passengers on the Hamburg-American liner America, yesterday from Hamburg, Southampton and Cherbourg, the wife of Col. O'Gorman, a retired British army officer and the head of the O'Gorman family in Ireland, and the Lady Alan Johnstone, wife of the Hon. Sir Alan Johnstone, British minister to Denmark, smoked after dinner in the Ritz-Carlton restaurant aboard the ship and did not seem a bit put out when they were asked if it were true. Their husbands were with them and puffed cigars to keep them company. They also appreciated the taste of their wives for nicotine. Anyhow, as the colonel remarked, no Irish gentleman would object to a lady smoking.—New York Sun.

FAIR HAVEN NEWS

Want New Police Precinct—Grand Avenue Bridge Opened 470 Times.

"I tell you that Fair Haven is greatly in need of a police precinct," remarked a well known Fair Havener last night. He was stating the proposition that while Fair Haven had never had the police protection to which this large territory was entitled, it was not likely to get its share of protection until there was a Fair Haven precinct created. Then he went on to say: "I am told that there are fifty-four police officers quartered at the Grand Avenue precinct. That is more than the building was ever intended to accommodate. Now, what is required is a precinct somewhere midway between the present precinct and Fair Haven East. Of course this whole matter could be better solved if the borough of Fair Haven East was in the city, so far as police and fire jurisdiction is concerned. It is only a question of time when the borough will come into the city boots and saddle. But this may not be very soon, and meantime Fair Haven ought to have a precinct. It would save the long tramp of the patrolmen getting on to their beats, which would be an important consideration. That would enable them to cover more territory, and so this district would be getting more police protection. The police commission ought to investigate the matter and have a report to present to the board of finance. The money could be appropriated for a Fair Haven precinct. Of course that would have to come into the yearly estimate. Anyway it is time to agitate in favor of the enterprise."

Yesterday was the first day since the freeze up that the smaller power boats were able to go down the harbor and work on the oyster beds. The rain and the thaw of Saturday softened the ice on the Quinnipiac narrows so that the boats went out yesterday morning. Ernest Ball's boat Eric and C. D. Parmelee's Spark went down the harbor and caught up part of a load each. Lancaft Brok, new steamer Amanda Lancaft, is over at the company's Greenport, beds, and is catching a load of about 3,000 bushels, which will be brought in here. The boat made the run from Quinnipiac river to Greenport in less than an hour. The steamer Captain Oskins says the boat runs first rate, and will make a fine boat for the city. The steamer William Lancaft is working on the company's Branford oyster beds.

It appears that Grand Avenue draw-bridge was opened just 470 times during the year 1907. This is rather different from what some people predicted when it was under process of construction. There were a few who thought cold water on the enterprise, and said the bridge would be used but little, and that it was throwing away money building a drawbridge there. It seems that last year it was opened on an average nearly one and a half times for every day in the year. This year promises to give more business for this bridge, or another coal yard is being established in North Front street, big bins are being built, and the coal will come in by water. Kimberly avenue bridge was opened last year only one time more than was the Grand Avenue bridge. But both the Grand Avenue and the Kimberly avenue bridges did very small business compared with the Quinnipiac bridge, which was opened 16,217 times. The Chapel street bridge was opened 3,481 times. The increasing use of these bridges on the Quinnipiac is another argument and one of the best that could be advanced in favor of deepening the channel of the Quinnipiac river, and while it would seem that the project is down and out so far as the present congress is concerned, it will be found that it is a pretty lively corps, and this project will yet receive the consideration that it demands.

By the will of the late Eruben H. Cox of East Haven, who died at his home a few days ago, property of an estimated value of $25,000 is disposed of. The estate is left to his widow, his son, Herbert W. Cox, and his grandson, Herbert E. Cox.

WALLINGFORD.

(Special Journal-Courier News Service.)
Wallingford, Feb. 17.—The Woman's club entertained the students of the senior and junior classes of the Wallingford High school, their mothers, and the teachers of the schools of the Central district this afternoon at the Library hall. The speaker of the afternoon was Arthur Deerin Call of Hartford, Conn. Seated on the platform with Mr. Call was the president of the club, Mrs. W. H. Goddard, Superintendent Clinton S. Marsh of the schools, and Mrs. Mabel S. Robbins, instructor of English at the High school. After an opening selection, "Summer Now Has Come Amongst Us" by the girls' chorus from the High school, Mrs. Goddard, who presided, introduced Mr. Call in a neat speech. The gentleman took for his subject "The Public and Her Schools." His talk was most interesting and held the attention of the large audience throughout. During his discourse he told of the establishment of the school savings banks in the institution of which he was principal. The plan has just been started in Wallingford, and the audience were deeply interested in the manner in which the scheme was received in the Hartford schools. Mr. Call has in his school 1,400 children, and during the first year of school savings banks $5,500 was deposited by the pupils. At the conclusion of his speech he was heartily applauded. Mrs. Goddard then announced that the committee consisting of Mrs. A. P. Greenleaf and Mrs. L. C. Jennings were ready to report the winner of the $5 prize offered by the club for the best English essay written by a member of the senior class. W. H. S. Mrs. Jennings stepped to the platform, and said that both Mrs. Greenleaf and herself had carefully read the essays handed in, and had decided No. 5 the winner. The compositions were all numbered, and the judges did not know the winner's name until their arrival at the hall this afternoon. The five dollars was presented to Mr. William O'Brien by Mrs. Goddard. Mr. O'Brien is the high stand man in his class and quite popular. The announcement of the winner drew forth great applause from the audience. For a closing number the girls' chorus rendered a lullaby in a very pleasing manner. Tea and cake were served after the exercises. The entire program was very interesting and was much enjoyed by the members of the club and their guests.

Some Examples on Steamers Arriving at New York Last Week.
Lady Juliet Duff, daughter of the fourth earl of Londale, and the Hon. Violet Mary Vivian, sister of Baron Vivian and maid of honor to the queen, were passengers by the White Star liner Adriatic, which reached her dock Monday after a battle with tempests all the way from Queenstown and they rather startled some of their conventional American cousins by nonchalantly smoking cigarettes in a lounge, where men and women are permitted to gather and indulge in tobacco in any form. The young women handled the cigarettes as if accustomed to them, and later they admitted to the reporters who talked to them that they did not see why smoking should be confined entirely to the men. If a lady wanted to smoke and liked smoking why should she be prohibited from enjoying herself, Lady Duff is accompanied by her husband, R. G. V. Duff, lieutenant in the 2d life guards who has the opinion that his wife has just as much right to smoke as he has.

Some of the American women who had been smoking on the quiet in their staterooms, as soon as they saw the young Englishwoman openly indulging, went back and got their own packages and soon there were eight or ten wreaths of vapor going up from the tables in the lounge.

The Hon. Violet Vivian when told that the Hon. Little Tim Sullivan had put through an ordinance designed to prevent women from smoking in public restaurants in this city looked faintly surprised. She did not understand how the Hon. Little Tim could do more than the premier of Eng and would dare to undertake. She was told that the Hon. L. Tim was a much more potent force in some ways than the premier. She said that in London women as a rule did not smoke in public. Nothing was thought of it, however, if they smoked in their own drawing-rooms. She believed that legally and morally women had as much right to smoke as men, and that right never had been disputed in the hotels and restaurants on the continent.

Two women passengers on the Hamburg-American liner America, yesterday from Hamburg, Southampton and Cherbourg, the wife of Col. O'Gorman, a retired British army officer and the head of the O'Gorman family in Ireland, and the Lady Alan Johnstone, wife of the Hon. Sir Alan Johnstone, British minister to Denmark, smoked after dinner in the Ritz-Carlton restaurant aboard the ship and did not seem a bit put out when they were asked if it were true. Their husbands were with them and puffed cigars to keep them company. They also appreciated the taste of their wives for nicotine. Anyhow, as the colonel remarked, no Irish gentleman would object to a lady smoking.—New York Sun.
