AT THE COLONIAL

The question of whether a woman has once overstepped the bounds of conventionality and has strayed from the straight and narrow path she can win her way back to respectability has been the topic selected by ministers, novelists and playwrights for years. That a woman can do it but that man must help her is shown in "The Flame of the Yukon," which will be seen at the Colonial theatre tomorrow and Saturday.

Dorothy Dalton, "The Flame" of the dance halls of the frozen north in the height of the gold rush when man's lawless passions were his only law, shows that such a "come back" is possible. For love of a stranger, who attracted her because he was different from the men she knew, she forsook the dance halls. "Black Jack," the king of the gamblers, said that she could not win in her fight for respectability and that she would return to his dance hall.

"The Flame" did return but it was to exact her price from "Black Jack" for what he did to the man she loved.

A thrilling, dramatic story with all the intensity of tropic love in the midst of the snows is "The Flame of the Yukon." It was written by Monte M. Katterjohn, directed by Charles Miller, and supervised by Thomas H. Ince.

AT THE MAJESTIC
 Bert Lytell, who is the star of the picture from Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Right of Way," showing at the Majestic theatre tonight, has achieved one long-sought ambition: he has shaved off his moustache.

It will be recalled that this magnetic and versatile young screen star, in order to preserve realism in "Lombardi, Ltd.," grew a record crop of hair and a moustache. The hair was not needed for the part of "Beauty" Steel, the dashing young attorney Lytell portrays in "The Right of Way," but in the earlier scenes of the Parker story the moustache, remodeled somewhat, was. When the outdoor part of the drama was reached in the course of production, Mr. Lytell, with his company at Lake Tahoe, Calif., took the first opportunity that presented to get rid of the troublesome thicket on his upper lip.

The director of "The Right of Way" is Jack Dillon, who is making the story into pictures from the adaptation by June Mathis.

"The Bishop's Emeralds"
 Captain Houghton Towler's strongly dramatic and emotional novel, portraying society life in England, "The Bishop's Emeralds" has been photodramatized by Virginia Pearson Photoplay, Inc., and will be presented at the Majestic theatre on Friday for its initial showing in this city.

The photoplay version features Edna Wallace Young, who has been christened "The Velvet-Headed Lady of the Screen," and gives her ample opportunity to display those talents for which she is justly famous on the American screen and stage.

Her exceptional popularity in motion pictures will be largely increased by her splendid acting in this motion creation, wherein she fills the role as a statuesque beauty and an exasperating societal snob.

Miss Pearson splendidly achieves dominance in a great emotional artist—a consummate comedienne who fills the lighter phases with elegance and enduring charm and a tragedienne who rises to a tremendous climax with natural and entirely convincing expression.

"The Bishop's Emeralds" is a photoplay which all motion picture fans should see.

AT THE AMERICAN
 Harry Carey's newest feature, "A Gun Fights Gentleman," announced for today and tomorrow at the American theatre, was written by Carey, together with Jack Ford, his director in most of his latest productions. The star conceived the plot while enroute on his country-wide tour of personal appearances.

John Merritt, a former ranchman who has become a wealthy Chicago packer, is determined to acquire the ranch of "They're Harry" Buford, which cuts a slice out of his vast Wyoming holdings. Money and the lure of amusement to her guests, a craft corporation lawyer succeeds in finding a flaw in Harry's title and his ranch is taken away from him and turned over to Merritt.

Chubby Harry goes to Chicago, calls on Merritt, and receives little satisfaction. His daughter, Mary, invites him to stay to a dinner party, expected him to be a source of amusement to her guests. He is humiliated at the table, and he leaves for home with vengeance in his heart, etc.

AT THE FIFTH AVENUE
 The romantic comedy-drama entitled "A Favor to a Friend," with the beautiful Emmy Wehlen as its star, is the headline attraction at the Fifth Avenue theatre tonight.

Among the most popular of the feminine stars of the screen, Emmy Wehlen has an enormous following of her own, who will be glad to learn that in her latest Metro vehicle, this comedy of favors, she will once more return in a part that permits her wearing many new and gorgeous sartorial creations of her own design.

The story is one of action and thrills, pulsating through a plot which depicts the attempts of a young western girl, who comes east to New York to claim her deceased father's estate, and who, upon her arrival, becomes entangled in a series of adventures in rapid succession.

It is said to be by far the best thing that Miss Wehlen has done on the screen, and in it she is well supported by the handsome Jack McCall, Bush Jay, Joseph Kilgour, Edna Conley, Jack Miller, Jr., Harry Todd and Fred H. Warren. Arthur Martinelli photographed "A Favor to a Friend," and Maxwell Karger, director general, personally supervised the entire production.

DRURY
 Owing to the condition of the highways during the month of March the Muscatine rural carrier has been unable to carry the mail any farther than Illinois City for the past three weeks. Owing to unusual depth of frost in some places the roads are still impassable with cars.
