'CAP' STUBBS

Several Davenport families will be without gas for lighting and heating. The board of public works through Building Commissioner Harry Phillips yesterday refused the Peoples Light company permission to tear up the paving in 12 different cases in order to make new gas connections. The Peoples Light company says this means that the connections will not be made. The 12 cases are in all parts of the city. Officials of the light company say the paving concerned is all old, has been laid for many years, and that this is the first instance in which permission to tear up paving in order to make gas main connections has been refused by the city. This is the second state in a controversy which began a few days ago when the Peoples Light company served notice on the city that it would be unable because of its finances to lay mains ahead of the full mileage of new paving ordered in Davenport this year by the present council.
