Details of Wolcott's Negotiations for Free Coinage of the White Metal.

PROPOSALS MADE TO THE BRITISH.

But Which Failed to Secure John Bull's Acquiescence—France Ready to Go the Limit if Other Commercial Nations Would; but She Makes a Demand on England That Is Promptly Rejected—Situation Not Hopeful for "Dad's Dollar"—India's Objection to a Change.

London, Oct. 22.—The correspondence in regard to the bimetallic proposals of the United States monetary commission was issued by the British foreign office last evening. The following account of the negotiations is taken from the official publication. At the conference held at the foreign office on July 12 the Marquis of Salisbury, the secretary of state for India (Lord George Hamilton), the chancellor of the exchequer (Sir Michael Hicks-Beach), the first lord of the treasury (A. J. Balfour), the United States ambassador (Colonel John Hay) and the United States monetary commissioners (Senator Edward O. Wolcott, ex-Vice President Adlai E. Stevenson and General Charles Jackson Payne) were present. On the invitation of the British premier Senator Wolcott explained that the object of the mission was to ascertain the views of the international conference of the views of the French, British and German governments on the question of reaching an international monetary agreement.

France Was Ready to Cooperate. They had been to France, where they had reached a complete and satisfactory understanding with the French government, and the envoys would have the co-operation in this matter of the French ambassador in London. The senator then explained that the success of the mission depended upon the attitude Great Britain would take, and he requested Great Britain to agree to open the English mints, as its contribution to the attempt to restore international monetary unity. The United States co-operating together in an attempt to do this.

The Marquis of Salisbury asked if France was ready to open her mints to free coinage, and Senator Wolcott replied, "Yes." The premier then inquired at what rate France would open her mints. Wolcott said at 15%.

Fourth, an agreement to coin annually so much silver, the amount to be left open.

Fifth, the opening of the English mints to the coinage of rupees and the coinage of British dollars which shall be full legal tender in the Straits Settlements and other standard colonies, and tender in the United Kingdom to the limit of silver legal tender.

Sixth, colonial action and the coinage of silver in Egypt.

WHAT FRANCE WAS WILLING TO DO

Would Open Her Mints to Silver if the Other Commercial Nations Would.

The French ambassador was invited to declare the position of the French government, and he said France was ready to open her mints to the coinage of silver if the commercial nations adopted the same course, and he advocated at great length the ratio of 15%.

Baron de Courcel said, as a personal suggestion, that among other contributions he thought Great Britain should open the Indian mints and also agree to purchase annually 100,000,000 sterling of silver for a series of years. Senator Wolcott accepted the proposal that the British government should make this purchase with proper safeguards and provisions as to the place and manner of its use.

Since this conference the British government has been considering the proposals and finally made the reply handed the United States ambassador Wednesday.

The reply of the government of India upon which Lord Salisbury based his decision is a long document, giving an emphatic negative to the proposal to reopen the India mints. It says: "The first result of the suggested measures, if they were to succeed even temporarily in their object, would be an intense disturbance of India trade and industry. There would be a sudden rise in exchange which, if the ratio of 15% to 1 were adopted, would be about 3 pence the rupee. Such a rise would be accompanied by acute industrial suffering. None of the advantages expected would be attained, and the country would pass through a critical period which would retard its progress for years. The position would be disastrous alike to the state, to individuals and to trade generally. The exchange value of the rupee, having risen suddenly, would fall again suddenly to a point far lower than the present level, probably 9 pence, and even lower. Such a fall, apart from other disastrous results, would necessitate additional taxation to the amount of many crores." [A "crore" is 10,000,000 units.]

BURDEN WOULD REST ON INDIA. Intimation That Uncle Sam and Johnny Crapaud Have "Put Up a Job." The reply points out that the proposed agreement would be a much more serious question for India than for the United States and France, as the whole risk of disaster from failure would fall upon India. "The effect of the adoption of the scheme would probably be an increase in prices in France and the United States, but a decrease in India. It is a change which France and the United States could contemplate with equanimity, but which would be manifestly impossible to India."

Then follows the opinion that India is on the point of securing a stable exchange of 16 pence per rupee, and it would be exceedingly foolish to throw away the position already attained by an acceptance of proposals which, if they failed of their intended object, would place India permanently under the silver dollar standard with all its admitted disadvantages. "Nothing but the most absolute necessity could justify India in joining in the experiment; and our belief is that the proposals will fail to secure a permanent ratio of 15% to 1."

We doubt whether any two or three nations in the world, unless one of them were Great Britain, could establish the required stability. It is certain that France, the United States and India could not.

The India government proceeds: "We do not hesitate to recommend that your lordship refuse to give the undertaking desired. We believe that our policy is to link ourselves to Great Britain. The ratio of 15% to 1, too high. Differing so widely from the existing ratio, it would immensely increase the difficulty. Indeed, if it could be secured and maintained successfully, we should object to the ratio in the interests of India, and recommend your lordship to refuse to do anything to participate in it or to do anything to encourage the formation of a union based thereon. We presume that a union based upon a ratio low enough to suit our interests would not be acceptable to France and the United States."

TRADE MOVEMENT IS IRREGULAR.

Demand Has Fallen Off, but the Volume of Business Is Still Large.

New York, Oct. 22.—Bradstreet's says: While the general trade movement is somewhat irregular, and there are further evidences of falling off in demand, the volume of business continues of large proportions. Speculation in wool has ceased and demand for the staple is less than for weeks past. Cotton goods are dull, and jobbers report dry goods slower than a week ago. Interior merchants in the central west have not expected, and many jobbers at western centers find that they over-estimated the consumptive demand when securing fall goods. Unseasonably warm weather has interfered with the movement of heavy goods at the west, but rains in Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska have improved the agricultural outlook.

The industrial situation continues to furnish employment to as many persons as at any preceding period this year, and at higher wages. Production of iron, steel, machinery, stoves, structural work, glass and woolen goods continues heavy. Steel mills have orders to carry them into 1938, and decline contracts for next year's delivery. This explains the advance in the price of Bessemer pig iron, while the foundry trades remain unchanged. The extraordinary heavy and steadily increasing production of iron is starting up furnaces long out of blast.

There are 205 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, against 194 last week, 292 in the week ending Oct. 22, 292 years ago, 221 in the like week of 1894 and 229 in the third week of October, 1893.

JOINT SERVICE OF CHRISTIANS.

Disciples and Quakers Hold a Meeting Together at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Oct. 22.—A joint service of Disciples and Friends was eagerly entered into by both denominations yesterday. The Friends spoke and prayed as the spirit moved them. At times there were as many as half a dozen persons on their feet at the same time, awaiting recognition from the chair. The Disciples were equally as anxious to say a word of greeting and Christian unity. The service was fervent and for thirty minutes the two conventions sat together, and then parted. The Disciples to adjourn their meeting sine die.

The important question which has been subject of debate in the Society of Friends of America for many years—the question of conferring legislative authority on the conference—has been finally settled in favor of the innovation. The plan adopted is the one submitted by the special committee, the only material change being that each yearly meeting is to have two delegates instead of one. The plan now only needs the approval of the yearly meetings to become a law of the church.

Opposed to Hanging and Fermented Wine. Chicago, Oct. 22.—Capital punishment and the use of fermented wine at communion was denounced at the Universalist general convention yesterday. Though there was no dissenting voice when reference was made to an official condemnation of the use of wine at communion, it was decided that such important step could not be taken without careful consideration, and the resolution proposed was laid on the table for action at the convention of 1939.

Democratic Editors of Illinois.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—It was Bryan for president, Mayor Harrison for governor and free silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 as a war cry in 1900 with the Democratic editors of Illinois who began their annual meeting at the Tremont House yesterday. Mayor Harrison, in his address of welcome, championed the 16-to-1 platform. The meeting was well attended from all parts of the state.

Mrs. Hoxsie Held in $1,000.

Creighton, Ia., Oct. 22.—Mrs. Hoxsie, wife of Editor Hoxsie, of the Creighton Gazette, who is accused of the murder of her daughter's illegitimate child, has been bound over to the grand jury. The bond is placed at $1,000.

Decision on Grain Speculation.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 22.—The supreme court in the case of Counselman & Co. vs. Manuel Reinhardt, brought up from Cass district court, declares that contracts for grain where the intention is merely speculation on the chances of rise or fall of the market, and no delivery is intended, are gambling contracts and void. It is not enough to render the contract void that the buyer intends it as a gambling contract, unless the seller participates in that intention.

Gotham Continues to Whop Her Up.

New York, Oct. 22.—A great number of political mass meetings were held throughout the metropolitan district last night, and the champions for the different candidates were out in force.
