CALIFORNIA LION ROUND UP

An Attempt to Kill Off the Big Cats That Worry Arizona Sheepmen.
 John McCarty, territorial game warden, has begun a big round up of California lions in the San Francisco mountains, about 150 miles north of Flagstaff, says a Phenix (A. T.) dispatch to the New York Sun. In that country the big cats are found in larger numbers than in any other locality in Arizona, and the party expects to bag several hundred of them.
 At one time the California lion was found in all parts of Arizona, but large territorial and county bounties have caused its extermination in many districts. At $20 a head hunting the beasts was a profitable business, and some hunters in times past have killed a score of lions in a week. A total of more than $100,000 has been paid in Arizona for scalps in the past ten years. Hundreds of lions beside have been shot by cattle, horse and sheep men who have not asked for the bounties, taking as their reward the fact that they have disposed of the cause of the slaughter of their calves, colts and lambs.
 While the lions have grown less common in the southern part of the territory, there has been no decrease in their numbers in the wilder northern regions. Sheepmen in the San Francisco mountains have complained of late that the lions were killing off all their lambs. Warden McCarty has taken the matter in hand, and with five experienced lion hunters and two score trained lion dogs he expects to rid the country of the pests. He will organize with the cowboys and sheepholders a large party which will scour the district where the lions are most common. The animals will be driven into the center of a circle where they can be killed.
 The California lion is a small species of the panther family. It is about the size of a Canadian lynx and possesses a similar nature. It is cowardly and has never been known to attack a man unless cornered, but is capable of a fierce fight when driven to bay. McCarty is a collector of specimens for Yale, Harvard, Cornell and other universities and expects to send them trophies of the big hunt.

"PRINCE AUTO'S" SERMONS
 Young Man Takes Tenderloin Habits in His Auto to Lecture Them.
 Shortly before 11 o'clock on every fine night there suddenly drops into the Tenderloin—from just where no one seems to know—a handsome victoria automobile and, after circling around a bit, comes to stand in front of the Haymarket, says the New York World. The machine is an elaborate affair, easily distinguishable from others of its kind by a powerful searchlight in the center of the dashboard operated by a storage battery under the seat. Suspended between the rear wheels is a red lantern.
 The victoria is operated by a fashionably dressed young man, who is said to be the son of a wealthy western clergyman. He has been sent east to perfect his education, but he spends more time with the blond haired women of the Tenderloin than he does with his books.
 The machine hardly comes to a stop before the word is passed through the dance hall that "Prince Auto" has arrived, and the women flock about begging for a ride. Picking out a woman, the "prince" will escort her to the victoria, and off they will go for a half hour in the park, in Chinatown or on Fifth avenue. At the end of 30 minutes the victoria will slide noiselessly up to the Haymarket, and, handing the woman out, the "prince" will dash in for another companion. This performance will be repeated until the dance hall is closed at 3:30 a. m.
 The real name of "Prince Auto" is Willson Kayne. Little more is known about him. The same girl is never taken twice, and the auto never stops during the ride. As she alights each girl is presented with a box of expensive confectionery, which usually contains a slip bearing a Bible verse.
 The "prince" is jolly and entertaining and refined in manner. He always urges the women to lead better lives. He declares that he was never made for a bookworm and that he would much rather study human nature than chemistry.

NEW GAME IN LONDON.

"Vint" Threatens to Displace Bridge Whist in Society.
 The supremacy of bridge whist is threatened by the advent of a new card game called "vint," says the London correspondent of the New York World. It abounds in penalties and complications and gives even greater facilities than does bridge for indulging the gambling instinct. The highest possible score is "Pierpont Morgan," which means 7,000 points a trick.
 Fivepage, or table tennis, at one time threatened to exorcise the bridge demon, but its popularity with the kind of people who gamble was short lived, and it has now taken its place as a passion of the middle class.
