

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Family Bookkeeping. "My account book," she said proudly, "showed that I had $8.15 more than I really did have, so I felt at liberty to expend the excess."

No Sympathy. "Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Perkins, "you know I never blame you for anything that is not your own fault."

Bliss. She put the book down with a sigh. "What is it, darling?" he asked.

Not Worth Breaking. Dealer—These are the most beautiful cut glass tumblers we have; $48 a dozen.

Covered the Bet. Sealed proposals will be received at the office of Leonard M. Drack, architect, until 1 o'clock, April 20, 1903.

Launched on His Literary Career. "I understand your son has decided to go in for literature."

The Unhappy Author. Little Brother—Let's see. What is the title of that new book of yours, Mr. Scribeblyer?

Apprehensive. "Those Vermont farmers who say they have to bear their maple sugar disappointment philosophically seem to have the right sort of grit."

Plenty of Room. "Yes," said the detestable bore, "at that moment my heart was in my mouth."

She's Right. She—I'm right because I'm right! He—How do you know?

The Vale of Silence. "And now our old time friend, Meekly, has joined the silent majority."

Just So. Little Elmer—Papa, what is the bone of contention? Professor Broadhead—The jawbone, my son.—Judge.

THE MERGER SUIT DISCUSSED

Continued from Ninth Page. There is hardly a consolidation possible that does not touch competition somewhere. No law can compel railroad companies to compete; hostility or rivalry is not commanded as a corporate duty.

Mr. Griggs was asked if he agreed with one of the counsel who was quoted anonymously as saying that the closing phrase of the judge's order in the merger case providing for the transfer of the stock to the present owners of the railroads "practically nullifies the whole effect of the decision."
