OLDEN TIMES

The formula by which Mishler's Herb Bitters is compounded is over two hundred years old, and of German origin. The entire range of proprietary medicines cannot produce a preparation that enjoys so high a reputation in the community where it is made as

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS.

It is the best remedy for Kidney and Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Cramp in the Stomach, Indigestion, Malaria, Periodical Complaints, etc. As a Blood Purifier, it has no equal. It tones the system, strengthening, invigorating and giving new life.

The late Judge Hayes, of Lancaster Co., Pa., an able jurist and an honored citizen, once wrote: "Mishler's Herb Bitters is very widely known, and has acquired a great reputation for medicinal and curative properties. I have used myself and in my family several bottles, and I am satisfied that the reputation is not unmerited."

Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup—Never Fails

Is Life Worth Living?

That depends upon the Liver, for if the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order—the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefulness gone, the spirits are depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

I have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none of them gave more than temporary relief, but the Regulator not only relieved but cured.

AMONG THE SEMINOLES.

PECULIAR MANNERS AND CUSTOMS OF THE REMNANT OF THE TRIBE.

A Visit to an Indian Camp-Fire—The Peculiarities of Indian Oratory—Narrative of a Day's Experience—Charms of a Chief's Voice.

Ten years ago the writer spent a year in the peninsula of southern Florida. In the inaccessible wilds of the great everglade region there were then existing two distinct tribes of the great Seminole nation of southern Indians.

The largest tribe was Seminole proper, and lived in what is known all over the state as "The Big Cypress" a dark swamp stretching across the peninsula near the northern end of the everglades. There were then several hundred of the warriors of that tribe. The smaller tribe, consisting of some forty or fifty warriors, staid on a reservation near the head of Pease creek and the Little Outhlacoochee river. The chief of that tribe was Chipco.

One night I had an opportunity of making Chipco's acquaintance at the little trading post where lived a man named Collins, who acted as government agent. We were out at the little store in the dusk of the evening, when suddenly two strapping warriors come striding up to the door, and each threw down his pack of skins, which he had brought along to barter for goods. Both grunted out their salutations in broken English, and seated themselves on a log near the store, which was located near the public road, in the edge of a little clearing surrounded by the boundless forest stretching away for miles and miles on every hand.

IN SILENCE BY THE CAMP FIRE.

While watching the two savages as they sat in silence around their camp fire, I was a little startled by a deep-voiced "Howdee" at my elbow, and turning I beheld a tall, muscular man, of commanding appearance, with a rather stern countenance and indescribable air of a man accustomed to command. It was Chipco. The other two rose at the approach of their chief and saluted him respectfully, saying as few words as possible, and making themselves understood by gestures.

Chipco threw down a long buckskin bag and began to empty it. What was my surprise to see that the bag contained gophers! There were ten or a dozen of the rough looking old tortoises in the sack, and it must have weighed between 100 and 150 pounds.

The old chief spoke a few words to Collins and myself, and then invited us to take a seat by the camp fire. We did so, and then, at a sign from the chief, the younger of the two warriors, who, as Collins told me, was young Tigertail, a son of the noted chief of that name, arose and began to relate the day's experience in the Seminole language. Collins interpreted portions of it in whispers, and I found that it was quite commonplace, but I can never forget the impression it made upon me, delivered in the manner peculiar to the race.

The warrior stood up, straightening himself to his full height, and with arms folded and head erect, he began to detail the occurrences of the day. The moonlight fell on his handsome features, bringing out every detail of the striking profile, which would have made a study for a painter.

In a low, subdued voice he began. First he told of the early start he made, and, by gestures, indicated that the sun was just rising. As he proceeded his voice rose with the sun, and from time to time he raised his brawny arm and pointed to the quarter of the heavens where the sun was at the time the incident occurred which he was then detailing. I was lost in amazed wonder and admiration, but this was only a prelude. His auditors showed their attentiveness by occasional grunts, but not a word was uttered until he had completed his tale. At the close he sat down, and the others mildly applauded him by favorable comments on his speech.

Then the other warrior, who was called Tustenugge, and who was the rightful chief of one of the petty clans of the Big Cypress tribe, began in the same manner and repeated his adventures, which were similar to the first because they had traveled together. Collins afterward told me that this young man had been defrauded of his chieftainship by a political rival, and had left the tribe and attached himself to Chipco's band.

THE CADENCES OF INDIAN ORATORY.

When he had concluded, the chief himself arose. I can see him now as he stood there in the moonlight, his manly form clad in a semi-savage dress, and his head poised as proudly as any knight of old, and the fierce flashing of his eye as he gazed at the distant lake for an instant, the silvery moonlight adding to the weirdness of the scene. He was then about 50 years of age, and the firm mouth, high bred nostril and magnificent physique of the man inspired respect in those who came in contact with him.

By the low, soft voice in which he began I understood that he started at the first blush of dawn, fifty miles away, near the shores of the great Okeechobee. His intonation was clear, his enunciation perfect, and the rythmic melody of his voice reminded me of the distant sound of a finely toned organ. Slowly he ascended the scale, and I could tell precisely when the sun rose, by the inexpressible tone of gladness in which his language was pitched. Higher and higher grew his voice, and the rare chords and cadences could have made the fortune of the more cultured brother, could he have possessed the power to imitate them.

He told us how he struck a long dry level, and how thirsty he became, and how he searched in vain for a pool or rivulet of water and how he grew fatigued, and the game bag grew so heavy that he bent beneath its weight. How the great drops of prespiration gathered on his brow, and at last with a majestic sweep he pointed directly upward, and at the same time burst into that glad tone again, which indicated that he succeeded in finding water. His voice was now pitched in its highest key, yet there was no harshness or discord in the tones, to jar upon the intensely high strung nerves of the interested listener. There was an instant's pause, and then I could observe a slight lowering of his voice as the sun started in its downward course.

Lower and lower it sank as the sun neared the horizon line, until, depicting his adventures in the darkness, his voice was almost a whisper. But the most wonderful thing was the tone that his rich voice assumed when describing the rising of the moon. I never again expect to hear anything so expressive as the tones of the chief's voice, as he depicted it; so subtle, so natural, so weird and unearthly, that I could understand him, although I did not know a word of the language. Finally he wound up when he got to the point of his arrival. There were half a dozen complimentary grunts, and then he resumed his seat.—Cor. Atlanta Constitution.

Hay Fever Sufferer.—The number of people annually afflicted with this most annoying malady seems to be greatly on the increase. * * * The editor of this journal is an annual victim, and, with a view to discover a specific cure, has tried numerous remedies. Of these, "Ely's Cream Balm" is by all odds the quickest and most satisfactory, two applications greatly allaying the usual symptoms in the nose and eyes. We would recommend its use by all subject to hay fever, and we gladly bear unsolicited testimony to its efficiency in our own case. * * * —Media, Pa., Record.

The jealous rivals of Omaha, infuriated at its prosperity, have taken to calling its inhabitants Omahogs.

I have been a Hay Fever sufferer for three years; have often heard Ely's Cream Balm spoken of in the highest terms; did not take much stock in it because of the many quack medicines. A friend persuaded me to try the Balm, and I did so with wonderful success.—T. S. GERR, Syracuse, N. Y.

REBUKE.

The world is old and the world is cold,
And never a day is fair, I said.
Out of the heavens the sunlight rolled,
The green leaves rustle above my head,
And the sea was a sea of gold.

The world is cruel, I said again,
Her voice is harsh to my shrinking ear,
And the nights are dreary and full of pain.
Out of the darkness sweet and clear,
There rippled a tender strain;

Ripp'led the song of a bird asleep,
That sang in a dream in a budding wood;
Of shining fields where the reapers reap,
Of a wee brown mate and a nestling brood,
And the grass where the berries peep.

The world is false, though the world be fair,
And never a heart is pure I said.
And lo! the clinging of white arms bare,
The innocent gold of my baby's head,
And the lisp of a childish prayer.

CONVICTS IN EASTERN PRISONS.

Monotonous Work of Filing Cannon Balls —The Delight of "Crank Labor."

The convicts were marched into a large yard and formed three sides of a square, standing about five feet apart, facing inward. Near one end of the line was a pyramid of twenty-four pound cannon balls. In the center of the square stood the officer or guard. When all was ready he gave the order, "One," when every man moved sideways five feet to the right, which brought the man at the head of the line opposite the pyramid of balls. "Two." Every man stooped down without bending the knees, the first man taking a ball from the pile, the others going through the motion till a ball reached them. "Three." The men moved back to their original places. "Four." They stopped and placed the ball upon the ground, not being allowed to drop it. And so on the movement continued, the orders quickened at the will of the guard till the balls were all conveyed through the line and piled up at the other end.

It required but a few minutes of these rapid movements to bring every man into a state of profuse perspiration, showing that the labor was of the severest kind. A short time was allowed the men to rest, when they were again called to order, and, by the same movement the balls were returned to their original places; and so on throughout the day these cannon balls were passed forward and back, with no object only to furnish labor for the men.

In the prisons established upon the solitary or separate plan, where the convicts work in their cells, they have what they called the "crank labor," an iron cylinder or drum two feet long and eighteen or twenty inches in diameter resting upon legs. A spindle or shaft is passed through the drum, with a crank on one end for turning it. Attached to the spindle within the drum, which was filled with sand, were flat arms, making it necessary to use considerable force to turn it—a dull, heavy drag. A dial attached to the machine registered the number of revolutions the convict had made. From 8,000 to 10,000 was the usual daily stint. Can one imagine a more terrible situation for a human being to be placed in than to be shut up alone in a cell ten feet square, and from morning till night compelled to turn a crank attached to such an infernal machine, with no results, nothing accomplished, no object, no hope except to complete his task, for upon that depends his supper of gruel?

The Brilliant Philosopher of Pessimism.

The man who makes pessimism a study is not always mentally the healthiest in the world. Byron is an example of the rule and Schopenhauer is an instance still more pertinent. This eminent German, born in 1778, lived for his philosophy and not by it. His life was regular and easy, if not luxurious. His daily routine was to partake of his coffee in the morning, to write, to take his exercise, to read the newspapers, play the flute, eat his dinner and go to the theatre. Yet he was of a melancholy temperament, bad-tempered, easily frightened and very distrustful. He kept his accounts in Greek and Latin, that they might not be understood by those about him. If he received a letter he feared to open it, lest it should reveal some bad news.

He took the most extraordinary precautions against accidents and disease. He lived in the first story, that he might more easily escape in case of fire. He trembled at the contact of a razor not his own. When he traveled he carried his own glass, fearing the leprous contact of another's lips. His gold was always kept carefully concealed and his bank-notes were disguised by mixing them with his medical prescriptions and miscellaneous papers. Such was the brilliant philosopher of pessimism whose works are better known to-day and have a greater influence than those of any philosophical writer of his own or any other nation. His is the secret heaven working in the discontented to —San Francisco Chronicle.

The Country Newspaper of Arkansas.

To write lightly, think deeply; to write heavily—don't think at all. The man who with a desperate mental effort vaguely remembers some old idea expressed in academic groves where sublime cranks moped in learned reverie, and who puts it on paper in such awkward and confused expression that its source is almost hidden, fancies that he has accomplished a great work; and, the editor of the magazine, noticing that it is badly written with a quill pen which has an impediment in its speech, decides that the article is a masterpiece.

Freshness and clearness of style, force and originality of thought avail nothing with the editor whose feet are in the muddy streets of the present and whose nose is thrust between the leaves of a mouldy manuscript of the past. The country newspaper of Arkansas is not run by this kind of an editor. He casts no eye on the past; he looks to the future, to to-morrow when Uncle Abner Boyle shall come in with a dozen eggs and a jack of new potatoes.—Arkansaw Traveler.

To Suit the Minister's Convenience.

Some day when the people begin to study the nomenclature of this great country they will be puzzled considerably to tell where some of the names came from. Quite likely they will go clear away back centuries before '49 and prove that America must have been known to the ancient Assyrians. There will be lots of fun for the future archæologists. There is a station on one of the railroads, and a town with a church, a saloon and the usual camp followers of civilization, which bears the euphonious name of Eltopia. The ancient Greeks may perhaps be held responsible for this in the future, but the plain fact is that a congregation and a minister wandered out to that place and found it all too inconvenient to address their religious reports from a place bearing the name given to it by the miners of "Hell to Pay," so they changed it into Eltopia.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Did Big Business Selling Eggs.

A darky did a big business selling eggs in Osborne the other day at 6½ cents a dozen. He was able to sell a good many at this figure by offering as an inducement to buy the privilege to the buyer of throwing them at his head thrust through a hole in a canvas.—Chicago Herald.

The Voice of the People.

The people, as a whole, seldom make mistakes, and the unanimous voice of praise which comes from those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, fully justifies the claims of the proprietors of this great medicine. Indeed, these very claims are based entirely on what the people say Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them. Read the abundant evidence of its curative powers, and give it a fair, honest trial.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

Albert Emminger, Covington Ky., was afflicted with catarrh three years. He says: "After trying every known patent medicine which I saw advertised, none of which helped me, I tried Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure as a last resort. It has made a complete cure, and is worth its weight in gold. I will give you other references from parties who have been cured. It is no experiment, but a positive cure." Large bottles $1.00 at H.
