SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

TORPID LIVER.

Is known by these marked peculiarities:

1. A feeling of weariness and pains in the limbs.
2. Bad breath, bad taste in the mouth and furred tongue.
3. Constipation, with occasional attacks of diarrhœa.
4. Headache in the front of the head; nausea, dizziness and yellowness of skin.
5. Heartburn, loss of appetite.
6. Distention of the stomach and bowels by wind.
7. Depression of spirits and great melancholy, with lassitude, and a disposition to leave everything for tomorrow.

A natural flow of bile from the liver is essential to good health. When this is obstructed it results in which, if neglected, soon leads to serious diseases. Simmons Liver Regulator exerts a most felicitous influence over every kind of biliousness. It restores the liver to proper working order, regulates the secretion of bile and puts the digestive organs in such condition that they can do their best work. After taking this medicine no one will say, "I am bilious."

"I have been subject to severe spells of congestion of the liver, and have been in the habit of taking from 15 to 30 grains of calomel, which generally laid me up for three or four days. I only took one dose of Simmons Liver Regulator, which gave me relief without any interruption to business."—J. Hugg, Middleport, Ohio.

THAT FAMOUS CHARGE.

THE LIGHT BRIGADE'S AWFUL COURAGE AT BALAKLAVA.

A Graphic Description of the Charge by a Russian Officer of the Battery That Sustained It—Gunners Silenced in Admiration.

Col. Nicholas Wampler, a Russian gentleman, formerly in the czar's army and diplomatic service, but now a resident of Baltimore, was interviewed by a Chicago Times reporter, and among the interesting things he said was the following description of the famous "charge of the Light Brigade:"

It was a sublime autumn morning, with the sun breaking through low mists, when our army began to move to the attack. I was in the artillery service, commanding then, as younker or sub-lieutenant, two guns of a six piece battery. We were moving before daylight, and, penetrating a defile in a line of hills, we debouched into the plain of Balaklava under a glorious sunburst. We could see the enemy's rockets and here and there a mounted vidette retreating before us, and as the fog lifted we beheld the smoke of the bivouacs that marked the hostile position along the heights. Then speedily came the other smoke as their ordnance opened the majestic prelude of the battle. Our artillery, clearing the pass, parted right and left to form with its 200 pieces a huge crescent with extremities in advance. My battery found position upon the extreme tip of the left scur. Between us the army poured—horse and foot—with a solidity and brilliancy that seemed the attributes of invincibility. Everything moved with speed and precision. We opened in concert along the line a storm of shell under which our huge troops of cavalry quickly formed and rode forward. The assault was well begun, and it was a gorgeous sight to see that great projectile of horse and human flesh, with arms and equipment that flashed with the terror of death, bearing onward. The Turks in the outer trenches fled almost without fire and the horsemen rode over their abandoned works as though on grand review.

THE QUEEN AND THE GREY.

The advance had been pushed with bloodless success and was about to enter a thin strip of timber at the very foot of the ridge when there appeared, breaking from this cover, two scattered troops of horse. I was attracted to the green jackets of the one and the white horses of the other, and have since learned that I then saw for the first time the redoubtable Enniskilleners and Scots Greys. How quickly they concentered and how well they struck our victory seizing columns history tells. I saw them, as glass in hand I stood on a battery wagon, vanish with a puff of smoke and a flash of circling steel within our ranks. I beheld a tremendous surge in our formations and saw the whole mass rolled back and driven off by the cheering Gaels like cattle before the herder. Great was our rage and dismay. An hour of artillery practice succeeded, during which our commanders were casting about for other plans, when we were attracted to a movement of cavalry among the enemy. An advance was being made by a red uniformed brigade numbering, I judged, between five and six hundred men. We concluded that this was a division to cover some serious enterprise and directed a close lookout to other quarters. The cavalry had disappeared in a depression in the ground.

THAT AWFUL SLAUGHTER.

I was studying the heights when I was surprised to see the troops presently reappear over a swell and still directly advancing. Our emotions were of pure amazement. Were the English, intoxicated by their success of the morning, going to capture the Russian army with a forage party? Evidently so, for on they came, in a commanding crowd by the hundred. Then a cannonading ceased on both sides and there was that hush of a bated audience upon some moving scene. They were still out of sight, but we could hear the dull strokes of their hoofs upon the turf. Up they came at last, and as they hove in view, now within cannister range, their bugles sounded the charge and they broke from a brisk trot into a gallop. They were a gallant company, truly, and it was visible even to me that there was good blood in the set faces and hearts of oak under those scarlet jackets. The order to fire ran along the lines and I personally seized the lock string of one of my pieces without sighting. Our whole artillery flamed and roared like a volcano. As my guns were run back to a taut breeching and more grape was rammed down their smoking throats I leaped to a caisson to see the havoc. It was awful. A third of the brigade had fallen, some like stones, others plunging and writhing with horrible wounds. The remainder bore on with gathering speed. I found them too close in upon my elevated position to depress my guns. A second volley struck them with the same frightful effect.

MELTING HORSES AND MEN.

The course of the shot through them was marked by a melting of horses and men and a spray of shredded flesh and clothing, while amid the hissing of the iron gale there was a low, harsh sound that I can ascribe only to the rending of bones and tissue. They passed us like coursers at the finish, the horses reaching with lightning strides and the men high in their stirrups cheering and brandishing their sabers. They passed within sow bull range of me and some of my men discharged their pistols and small arms upon the red ranks. Into the billow of smoke that rolled from the heart of our position they flew and there came a sudden check to the firing as though the cannon had been throttled. The shock of direct conflict ensued, but in a few minutes the broken remnant of the troops reappeared, forced back by the hopelessness of the attack. There was some firing upon the brave fellows as they retraced their corpse strewn path of glory, but my battery took no part in it. We felt great admiration for the troops, but never understood, as no one ese, I believe, the purpose of the maneuver.

Exterminates Cockroaches.

A housekeeper, who was recommended to try cucumber peel as a remedy for cockroaches, strewed the floor with pieces of the peel, cut not very thin, and watched the sequel. The pest covered the peel within a short time so that it could not be seen, so voraciously were they engaged in sucking the poisonous moisture from it. The second night that this was tried the number of the cockroaches was reduced to a quarter, and none were left alive on the third night.—Baltimore American.

A Million Bushels of Wheat.

Discussing on the magnitude of a "million bushels of wheat," a broker is quoted as saying: "If 1,000,000 bushels were loaded on freight cars, 500 bushels to a car, it would fill a train over fifteen miles long. If transported by wagon, forty-four bushels on a wagon, it would make a row of teams 142 miles long. If made into bread, reckoning a bushel to every sixty pounds of flour, it would give each man, woman and child in the United States a two pound loaf."—Chicago Daily Business.

The Ghost of a Chance

"Materializes" and becomes a veritable reality when health, a will o' the wisp often chased in vain, is sought by the nervous, dyspeptic, bilious invalid through the agency of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Looming in the distance at first, it is surely drawn toward the sufferer by the Bitters' potent influence. It incorporates itself with his being. It is seen reflected in the hue of the countenance, the animation of the eye. it is felt in a sense of renewed vigor, in the restoration of nerve tranquility and digestion and undisturbed nightly repose. What person, suffering from any of the maladies to which the Bitters are adapted, will postpone the means of cure knowing it can be relied upon? Dyspepsia, constipation, malarial disorders, rheumatism, biliousness, kidney inactivity are certainly conquered by it.

SUNDAY IN A PRISON.

Murderers and Thieves Who Sing "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Six hundred men in striped clothing listened to the sermon of the Rev. Mr. Barnwill at the prison church in Jeffersonville yesterday morning, says The Louisville Times. Since breakfast the cells had been open, and the men sat about in the corridors amusing themselves by singing, telling stories and in divers ways.

It was a curious, yet withal a sad sight. Among them were great, powerful fellows, with splendid muscles and intelligent faces—men who, had they stuck to the paths of honesty, might have ranked high among their fellows in social and political life.

Then there were scores of low browed convicts, with the peculiar hang dog look that always characterizes a sneak thief, who did not seem at all out of their proper sphere.

There were large men and small men, fat men and lean men and ugly men; in fact, every type of mankind could have been selected from among them. There were many present whom the reporter knew in happier times.

Towering high above all the rest was the figure of a man who now owns one of the finest farms in Clark county and who once stood among the foremost in his neighborhood. It was Jack Robinson, who is serving a life sentence for killing his neighbor, Samuel Hay, in a quarrel about the boundary lines of their farms.

He is over 70 years of age, his hair and beard are long and gray, and it is apparent that his sentence will be a short one.

Looking about him the reporter saw a dark headed man eyeing him intently. It was Edward McDermott, a man with whom many years ago the writer played at school.

Upon every hand there were murderers, forgers, sneak thieves, embezzlers and men who previously obtained a livelihood by "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain."

At 11 o'clock the big bell on the top of the prison sounded, and the men quickly formed into line and marched up to the chapel in single file. Each had his right hand on the shoulder of the man in front of him.

The first rows were first filled, then the second, and so on until every seat was taken. A space in the rear right hand corner was reserved for the colored convicts.

On the right side of the pulpit is a space reserved for visitors, and here the reporter sat, while on the left is the little organ and the benches for the choir. A smooth faced, youthful prisoner took his seat at the instrument, while the choir, the members of which all wore stripes, took their seats.

The little organ responded to the touch of the convict player, and the choir sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," as well as they render it in most churches where the members are free. Several other songs were sung, and then the chaplain preached an eloquent sermon.

Every man listened attentively throughout, and three cheers for the governor of the month when the good man had concluded. Then another sing was rung, the benediction was pronounced and the men slowly filed out to dinner.

In the afternoon they were again let out in the cell house until 4 o'clock, when they were locked up for the night. This is a fair sample of the way every Sunday in the year is spent.

Climbing Stairs and Hills.

The doctors tell us that a moderate climbing of stairs and hills is beneficial. It stimulates the action of the heart, and where this organ is sluggish in its movement it is well to accelerate it by walking slowly up any ordinary ascent. It is, indeed, becoming a notion, abhorrent to avoid everything in the way of second or third stories and those conservative persons who cling to their upper offices and have no elevator are let along by life insurance companies, and by nearly all who employ help in their households. The accommodating elevator is now within reach of all who can afford to pay a small sum for its use, and as such it is destined to become more and more popular. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. WHAT IS SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

THE SUFFERER'S FRIEND.

How many people who are suffering from blood poison the world knows not but read the following letters and you may be interested:

FOUND BY ACCIDENT.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 30, 1887.

I have been a sufferer for six years with catarrh, ulcerated sore throat and rheumatism of the chest, from blood poison. About four weeks ago I was passing the Botanic Blood Balm store No. 8, North street, Baltimore. I went in and consulted your agent about my case. He gave me one of your B. B. B. "Book of Wonders," which I read. I called in a few days afterward and got a bottle of your Botanic Blood Bhim—B. B. B. I am now on my third bottle and will say that I have felt a marked improvement since the third day after commencing to use your medicine. I now have no trouble from my throat, and have improved so much in every way that I am satisfied that by the use of your medicine I will soon be all right.

I have taken many and some good prescriptions and medicines for this trouble, but I think your B. B. B. the best remedy I have had, and I cheerfully recommend your Botanic Blood Balm to the public as the quickest and best blood remedy I have found, after six long years of search for health. Very respectfully yours, JOSEPH W. FLOWERS.

ONE BOTTLE DID IT—BOILS CURED AND HEALTH RESTORED.

B. B. B. Co., Atlanta, Ga:

GENTS.—My sister was afflicted for a number of years with boils scattered about all over her person. They would make their appearance every spring, and last through the summer and until late in the fall. Her health was sadly impaired, losing flesh and strength every day; in fact, they were sapping her life. I gave her one bottle of B. B. B., and the effect was like magic, producing a complete cure and restoring her health. Today she is perfectly sound and her health fully restored. It is without doubt the best and most valuable blood purifier now on the market.

Paine's Celery Compound

JAS. L. BOWEN, Springfield, Mass., writes:—"Paine's Celery Compound cannot be excelled as a Nerve Tonic. In my case a single bottle wrought a great change. My nervousness entirely disappeared, and with it the resulting affection of the stomach, heart and liver, and the whole tone of the system was wonderfully invigorated. I tell my friends, if sick as I have been, Paine's Celery Compound
