Can Real Happiness Be Found in This World?

The orator brought in was the Hon. Limbo Johnson, of Cynthiana, Ky.

He was a very short, corpulent man, dressed in a check suit, and was entirely baldheaded. At first sight he rather disappointed the audience, but he had scarcely opened his mouth when everybody became interested. It was evident that he was cool and collected. He took seventeen large swallows of water from the ice pitcher, stepped on a cockroach which was running across the platform for the president's leg, and softly began:

De man who 'spects to find real happiness in dis world am sartin to be disappointed. De world wasn't made fur dat purpose, an man wasn't built dat way. It was intended dat we should simply hev streaks of happiness mingled wid streaks of sorrow, an it am entirely useless to seek to change de laws of natur. Teke de case of Samuel Shin, fur instance. He is walkin 'long Sixth avenoo, a-feelin dat life ain't worth de livin, an dat if he had hung hisself wid a grapevine twenty y'ars ago he would hev bin better off. Dat's a streak of sorrow. Purty soon he finds a five dollar bill on de sidewalk. [Sudden agitation all over the hall.] Dat's a streak of happiness.

Samuel at once braces up an is glad he didn't hang hisself down dar in Alabama. He is gwine 'long de street plannin what he'll do wid dat money an feelin dat he'd allus like to lib in dis worold, when a policeman obertakes him an raps him on de cokernut wid his club. [More agitation.] Dat five dollars belonged to de officer, yo' see. It fluttered out o' his vest pocket while he was smilin at a woman in de third story across de street. He drums on Samuel's head wid his locust an takes dat money away. Dat's a streak of sorrow agin for Brudder Shin, an so it keeps goin all frew life. [Cheers.]

Waydown Bebee is a-sittin in his cabin home, continued the orator, an he's got two soft co'ns and a sore heel. Boaf of his dawgs am ailin, an one of his chill'n has got de croup. [Sensation.] De rent am due, de flour bar'l am empty an he hain't got but two cents in his pocket. Dat's a streak of sorrow. Brudder Bebee is a sort o' thinkin dat he'll go down to de Norf river an precipitate hisself off de dock an fetch up in dat better land, when Judge Cahoots drops in. [Everybody looks at the judge.] De jedge he am going to gib a birthday party, an he has come to ask Brudder Bebee to lend him fo' caneseat cheers and honor de party wid his presence. Brudder Bebee goes ober dar an he eats half of a large watermillyon, two canteloupes, three dishes of ice cream an two sassers of peaches an cream. Dat's a streak of happiness. [Cries of "Yum!" "Yum!" and wild applause.]

My frens, my time is limited, an I can't speak no mo'. I simply say to yo', doan 'spect to find happiness in chunks. Doan 'spect to eber be real happy fur ober two hours at a time. Ize obleeged fur yo' kindness an courtesy, an arter dis meetin is ober I'll show any of yo' free ob cost how to work yo'r ears backwards an fo'ds till yo' kin frow yer hat off yer head.—New York World.

Two Bright Children.

One of my friends is the happy father of a five-year-old girl who is as autocratic as the czar himself. Nothing pleases her better than to order papa to take her out for a walk—and a long walk too. On a recent Sunday he determined to give her all the walk she wanted. It was a long promenade, and it took in a goodly portion of the East End. It was so long, in fact, that after a while poor papa could scarcely drag his wearied limbs along. He was glad enough to come within sight of his home again, but just as they reached it the little maid cried out, "Oh, papa, we must'nt go in just yet; let's walk up and down awhile and get rested!"

"What did that lady have the screen across one end of the room for, ma?" asked little Johnny, who had been making a call with his mother.

"I suppose she had something there she didn't want seen," replied his mother.

"And was that the reason, ma, that when you thought she wasn't looking you peeped behind it?"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Too Much.

I've been captured by de Hottentots
And slaughtered fifti a score,
I have fought de wild Comanches
When I've stood knee deep in gore;
I've been whirled up in a cyclone,
I have smoked de cigarette,
I have faced all kinds er peril
And have not been frightened yet.
But I want to tell yer, stranger,
An I'm givin it to yer straight,
I wouldn't umpire ball games
Fer der proceeds of der gate.
