Several parties of Tucsonians will probably go out into the open country in the immediate vicinity of the city Sunday to spend the day, while others intend going out some time during the coming week.

Dove hunting in this vicinity is usually very good and if reports of the plentifulness of this game are to be believed, the sportsmen have a season replete with pleasure in store for them.

Silver City, N. M., April 25.—Albert Morales, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Morales of Mesquite, had one of his legs badly crushed by falling under a freight wagon last Monday. The lad was on one of the horses in the long freight team and in attempting to win one of the animals he fell from his seat. Before the team could be stopped the wagon passed over his leg. He was hastily brought to Silver City to the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Rodriguez, where he is receiving medical attention. The boy's father works in the Mesquite mines.

IRRIGATE LAND IN ARIZONA BOOSTERS TROUANT OFFICER ENFORCES LAW

Grass Plots of Boulevard Watered by System of Sub-Tilting; Idea Borrowed From Western Ranches.

Chicago, April 25.—Among the scores of sidesteps around the corners from the big tent when the National Irrigation congress has its annual session and its thousands of visitors here next December will be one of as much if not more interest than such points of importance to the visitor as the busiest corner in the world, at State and Madison streets in the heart of the downtown loop, the sky-scraping office structures, the canyon-like downtown streets in the financial centers, the meeting ground of all nations, Halsted street, which splits the West side for 25 miles and in which one may ride in a trolley car almost an entire day for five cents, as well as the maze parks and boulevards fronting Lake Michigan—and that will be a complete pumping irrigation system in operation.

Chicagoans have learned much of irrigation and the results therefrom through reading, attending irrigation exhibitions and so on, but that an irrigation plant in its operation here and abroad in the heart of the city as a whole at that, few, probably, of the millions who make the great population of the national gateway, are aware, while strangers in Chicago, especially from the west and south, naturally would expect an irrigation plant to be about the last thing to be found here. It is true the plant is a small one, compared with those of the west, but it is an irrigation system in fact and is so called.

The commissioners of the South Park and Boulevard system decided last year to experiment with irrigation, and the outcome of the experiment, which is said to be unusually successful, is to be watched with interest by similar organizations throughout the country, especially in the east.

The plant has been installed in Grand boulevard, one of Chicago's handsomest residential avenues, and extends from East Thirty-ninth to East Forty-third streets. The purpose of the plant is to keep grass plots in good condition without the tedious and expensive hose sprinkling which has heretofore been employed.

The boulevard, which is one block in width, comprises three driveways. Four-inch water mains have been placed at each side of the two wider plots of ground which are separated by the middle driveway, while one single main was laid along the plot adjacent to the sidewalks. In each corner portions of this have been placed underneath the plots, connected at each end with the water mains. It is the plan to flood the irrigation tiles through the water mains whenever the ground becomes dry, the soil automatically to take up as much of the moisture as is necessary. In this manner the practice of hand sprinkling is to be done away with.

The sprinkling heretofore has been done at night, as the commissioners as well as private citizens along the boulevard were prohibited by city ordinances from watering the grass in the day time, the ordinance fixing a certain time when water could be taken from the mains for sprinkling purposes.

It will be a problem of a few minutes only to fill the tile pipes when irrigation is needed, and this can be done from one central point. The idea is the same as that employed on many big irrigation projects, carried out on a big scale. It is said the commissioners conceived the idea after viewing localities in the west where irrigation is practiced.

Work of installing the plant was started late last fall, and the arrival of cold weather caused a cessation of labor for a short period, the ground freezing before the laborers were able to reach the surface which were torn up when the tiles were placed. This condition made things somewhat disagreeable in the boulevard homes some weeks later because of the wet, and there was considerable criticism of the action of the commissioners in having the grass plots torn up. The work was completed early this spring, however, and new residents along the avenue are congratulating themselves that Grand boulevard is the first street to reap the benefits of the irrigation experiment. It is planned to employ the same irrigation system along the other boulevard projects of the city and within a few years the plant will be something of a plan in proportion, as Chicago comprises over 200 square miles of territory.

DODGES BULLETS IN AGUA PRIETA BATTLE

Lordsburg Man Shows Curiosity During Battle and Escapes Capture; Women Hide in Cellar.

Lordsburg, N. M., April 25.—J. L. Wells of this city was a Douglas last Thursday, the day of the first battle of Agua Prieta. He was in the Copper Queen company's office when the trouble began and stayed there till it was over. There were twelve brick walls between him and the firing line, and he said he had no anxiety to lessen his protection. While the fire was going on the telephone bell rang and a call came for one of the men in the office. The call was from his house, and he was told that bullets were coming into the house. He found out that on one had been hurt, and told his family to go down in the cellar and stay there till the war was over, which Mr. Wells considered very good advice. If more people in Douglas had as little curiosity as Mr. Wells there would have been fewer casualties on the American side of the line.

Springtime in Air Causes Boys to Leave Books for Ol' Swimmin' Hole; Girls Also Play Hookey.

Roswell, N. M., April 25.—The sunnier and tamer of the public school system of this city proposes to see to it that the compulsory school law of this territory will be observed, and that the little Johnny that stoops up at the Haynes Swimming pool, or any other place in this city during the regular school hours will find himself in the hands of city Marshal Roy Woodruff, and he will see to it that part of his training will be in public works, if he is ever again in parts of age.

This is not only the motto as given out by Superintendent M. H. Brasher, but City Marshal Woodruff already has a large number of warrants at his hand. They have been read to some of the scholars, and stated to them that their warrants would be held, and not enforced as long as they were in school, but just as soon as they became truants, these warrants would be put into effect immediately.

As the spring has opened up, it has become the idea of several of the boys that it was worth while in the winter then to study, and this has become a serious matter, and that three of the little girls were persuaded with this idea, and they too found it nice to rest under the shade of the beautiful trees along the banks of the swimming pool, than to bend over their books.

They were brought before the professor and told that a school calendar looked after by the superintendent, and that they too would have to watch out for the enforcement of this law. The first part of this week an urban was found on the street holding banners, when the superintendent thought he was having his whole school in his books. He was brought out, and told that he would have to go to school, and his mother had told him, according to his story, that she did not want him to go to the Pancy school, but that he should go to the "big school."

He was given an order to his teacher at the Pancy school which read: When this boy fails to report on time, notify the superintendent, and that his mother was not running the schools, and as that was his district, he could go no other but the Pancy school.

BAILEY AT CUMBERLAND

Just now, when every one is talking about Joseph W. Bailey and his achievements in politics, and statesmanship have been heralded wherever the telegraph and newspaper can carry them, it might be worth while to pause a moment and look at him as he was some 10 years ago, when a student in the law department of the Cumberland university. He enjoyed the law school here from Mississippi where they have had the careers of such notable statesmen and orators as Sergeant S. Prentiss and Jefferson Davis to stimulate the ambition of young men.

Senator Bailey's career as a student is not unlike that of most students—he met with no very unusual successes. During his time in the law department he had his hand on him and marked him for such unusual success as came to him later in life. His career as a student is fresh in the minds of people here with many years of life and usefulness ahead of them. The give him credit for having been a good student, though not always regular in his attendance at class, and not up to the most other people, he had some peculiarities. He was just a little exclusive—was seldom seen walking the pavement arm in arm with his fellow students, but most always alone.

In the debating society he was prompt in attendance, and showed at that early day the same marked ability as a debater that he later developed so wonderfully. In the moot court work he was at home, going into all his cases to win, and win he usually did. When any of his classmates were assigned on the opposite side of the case, they knew they would have to fight and fight hard if they stood any show against his eloquence and ability in handling his case. Senator Bailey was not entirely averse to social functions while a student, and as so many students grew much in love with one of Lebanon's most excellent young ladies. Many thought a marriage would be the natural result, but true love never runs smooth, and possibly did not in this case, as they never married.

MAN KILLED BY REBELS HAD NO RELATIVES

Robert Harrington, Railway Employee Buried at Douglas; George L. Puckett Was Insured One Day; Body Found in Trenches.

Douglas, April 25.—The grimaces of war was exemplified here Saturday, when Robert Harrington, a railway employe was buried with simple services from an undertaking chapel after the railway company had exhausted every effort to find his relatives. Apparently he was alone in the world. He was killed by bullets from the rebel guns during the battle at Agua Prieta.

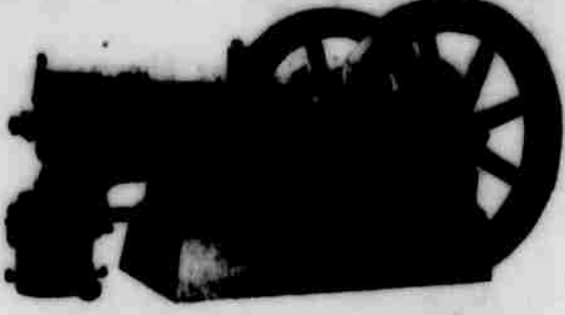

George L. Puckett, who died last week after a brief career of one day with the insurgents, was buried here also. He arrived in Douglas looking for work, but found no employment. After watching the rebels fight for a time, he ran over to their trenches, enlisted, secured a gun and opened fire on the federals. After the battle, he was picked up in the trenches, desperately wounded and made his way across the line, dying a few days later.

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT GETS ANOTHER BOOST

Road From El Paso to New Mexico Line Is Rapidly Being Pushed to Completion; Ready for Laying of Gravel.

La Luna, Tex., April 25.—The Capitan company's outfit has been up and has entirely repaired the macadam road between El Paso and the New Mexico state line.

From 50 to 60 teams have been at work grading the newly opened road toward Las Cruces, which is a continuation of the El Paso county macadam road, but those grades are so soft yet that they are hardly passable except for teams or high power machines, the work of applying the gravel not yet having been commenced.

The Santa Fe is making some extensive track improvements north and south of here, having 25 men at work at that point now.

FEEDERS LOSING MONEY ON MUTTON

Kansas City Reports Prices Considerably Under That of a Year Ago for Sheep and Lambs Full Fed.

Kansas City, April 25.—When you buy mutton now the price you pay is less, or should be less, than the actual cost of production. Neither the packer nor butcher loses anything in the process of supplying you with that sort of meat, but the corn belt sheep feeder is up against a $5,000,000 loss on his winter's operations in sheep.

At the stockyards, men who are familiar with sheep prices and the expenses of preparing sheep for market say all sheep marketed since the first of the year will lose the feeder $1 a head.

Where the Loss Came In. Since January 1 nearly three million sheep have been received at the five western markets. Most of them were purchased last fall and early in the winter, when they, at $5.50 to $6 a hundred pounds, and sent to Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Illinois feed lots. When fat they were returned to market and the price paid by dressed meat men seldom exceeded the cost price to stockmen.

The fault is not with the sheep, a feeder explains. It was just a case of the mutton's sheep fed during the winter and the market readjusting itself from an extraordinary high level to a lower basis. In the first three months this year receipts of sheep at the five western markets were 1,250,000 larger than in the corresponding time last year.

"But We Can Stand It." Sheep feeders are asking their loss uncompensatingly and the old-time feeders say that they can stand reverses once in a while. Prices now are $2.50 to $4 a hundred pounds lower than a year ago. The early 1910 prices were the climax to a prosperous five-year period for sheep feeders.

Each bidder will be required to deposit a certified check of $100.00 payable to the city of Albuquerque, to insure the good faith of the bid, check to be returned to the bidder when contract is entered into. Said contract to be let to the lowest and best responsible bidder at so much per meal and so much for salary. All bids subject to rejection by the city council. Contract to run from May 19, 1911 to May 19, 1912 or until a new contract is entered into between the city and some other person to do and perform such services.

The city ordinances are to be considered a part of this advertisement and all bids shall be in accordance therewith, and all duties required hereunder shall be in accordance with and subject to the orders of the police committee of the city council.
