Senator Hanna is the maddest man in Washington. He knows that the ship subsidy bill is dead for this session, but refuses to allow the corpse to be buried, and is indulging in all sorts of threats of what he is going to do to get even with those republican senators who declined to help him jam the bill down the throats of the minority...

WHERE THE SOIL BURNS. "There is a tract in northern Ohio," said Edward G. Baird of Cleveland, at the Shoreham last night, where farms are sometimes destroyed by fire. I do not mean that farm buildings merely are burned, but the soil is reduced to ashes.

It is an interesting fact, and we think not generally known, that Richmond, Va. is the only American city in which the wards are designated, not by numbers, as in most cities, but by the names of statesmen...

THE BOY AND THE LADY.

The little boy was about 10 years old and he was proceeding down Michigan avenue at a slow pace. He had the most curious legs—his knees knocked violently together at every step, his feet turned in. Besides, each limb described a semicircle as the foot was planted on the walk.

There is an Italian proverb which says that where the sun does not enter the doctor does not enter. The saying cannot be disputed, though our sanitary reformers have, perhaps, hardly recognized the importance of sunlight in the house as well as of pure air and pure water.

ABSENT-MINDED SHOPPER.

Young, married, studious, visionary and very absent minded, he approached the young lady at the counter as though he were in his sleep. "Please let me see a sample of your left-hand pockets," was his surprising request.

JOHNNY SUSPECTS HIS PA.

"Pa," said Johnny, looking up from his book, "what is the meaning of 'metempsychosis'?" A look of confusion suddenly overspread pa's countenance, but it was only for a moment.

CAUSED FAMOUS QUARREL.

For $2,000 has been sold in Paris a piece of lace which was the cause of a quarrel between Napoleon and Josephine, in which the cheeks of the empress were slapped. It had been the property of Mme Perusset, daughter of a favorite maid of the mighty emperor. Napoleon had brought the lace from Italy. He often brought her beautiful things on his return from a successful campaign, and Josephine never asked him how he had got them for she thought that perhaps he would not care to tell.

MEXICO'S SECRET SERVICE.

"President Porfirio Diaz has the greatest secret service system in the world," declared an American business man who resides in the capital, and who was chatting about peculiar features of life over the Rio Grande frontier, to a reporter of the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "I say President Diaz has the system," he continued, "because it is the direct work of his administration, and he built it up himself. He has always kept it rigidly in hand and has undeniably made it an executive instrument of extraordinary power. The best proof of its efficiency is to be found in the simple fact that during the five years of his administration, dealing with people who are natural born plotters and revolutionists, not one conspiracy worth talking about has ever gained headway. They have crumpled up by the score, but have all been nipped in the bud, and what is more, the nipping was usually done in a fashion that left it clearly apparent that Diaz knew all about it from the beginning—something calculated to send cold chills galloping up and down a conspirator's backbone—or, at least, so it has been asserted by gentlemen of experience in that business. Of course, any outsider who assumes to be familiar with the private workings of such a bureau is merely talking through his hat, but at the same time a man in active life in the city is quite apt, now and then, to stumble over some startling evidences of its existence. To illustrate the point I'll tell you a little story: I launched out in Mexico years ago as a representative of several big American manufacturers, and opened a very handsome suite of offices at the capital. My janitor, errand runner and general factotum was an old man named Luis. Something-or-other, I've really forgotten the name, who came to me with so many glib letters of reference, and was so humble, polite and eager to get a job, that I engaged him on the spot. My idea was to make the offices a pleasant lounging place for wealthy planters and others with whom I might do some future business in machinery, and to that end I found old Luis invaluable. He was continually bustling about in the service of my visitors, and before long he was easily the most popular person on the premises. That went on for fully a year; then Luis suddenly threw up the job and soon afterward I obtained irrefutable evidence that the fellow was a government spy. There was a good deal of drawing room conspiracy in the air at the time, and no doubt some of my planter friends were foolish enough to entangle themselves in its meshes. At any rate, Luis had entered my service with the evident idea that the offices had been opened as a rendezvous for upper class revolutionists, and the fact that he stuck to a dead trail for an entire year shows how thoroughly every suspected point was covered. When arrests came they came like thunder, claps out of clear skies, and evidence was secured by ways and means utterly incomprehensible to the victims. In my own case this poor doddering, white-haired old serving man was assuredly the very last person on the premises whom anybody dreamed of associating with a police spy. I would have come under suspicion myself first."

LIGHT A FOE TO DISEASE.

According to a French authority, M. Trelat, who read a paper on the subject at a recent medical congress in Paris, light should not be admitted horizontally, as by the ordinary window, nor vertically, as by a skylight. Our rooms should be so constructed as to receive their light at an angle of thirty degrees. The objection to horizontal light is based upon the theory that its rays, as they enter the room, by which escape from the soil. In any case it is most important that light should be freely admitted to every floor of a house, and most of all, to those lower regions which it so often fails to penetrate. It is in the lower part that microbes most do congregate, and sunshine is the enemy of bacteria. We are much afraid, however, that these utterances are counsels of perfection. Still, the object should be kept in view, and we should endeavor to maintain a condition of health.—London Lancet.

Notice Of Removal. The steady growth of our business from year to year and the constantly increasing patronage has at last compelled us to look for more room and as a consequence we will, on March 1st, vacate our present location, where we have been for a good many years, and move to larger quarters at 98 South Main street, where we will occupy the down-stairs store with a complete Spring Line of Ladies' Cloaks, Tailor-Made Suits, Skirts, Waists and Jackets, the floor over it, with a new stock of Men's and Boys' Clothing, Hats and Shoes, which, as usual, will be sold on the easiest terms of credit. Both store and floor are now being fitted up with all the 20th century improvements, and when the carpenters, painters, paper hangers and electricians finish their work our customers and their friends will find our store to be a credit to the City of Waterbury and vicinity. Our stock of Ladies' and Gentlemen's Garments are now being made up especially for the coming spring trade by the best New York tailors, and our line in every department will be bigger and better than ever before.
