pieces coined for the unfortunate Emperor Maximilian of Mexico and dated 1866 brings attention to an interesting series of coins which made their appearance in the brief period of the attempt to establish a European monarch upon the throne of the Monte-

ZUMBE. Of course, one of the first acts of Maximilian upon his accession to the throne was the striking of coins bearing his portrait and title. The silver coins were of 5, 10 and 50 centavos and 1 peso. The copper coinage of Maximilian consisted of a single denomination, the one-centavo piece. The story was generally circulated at one time that only 90 pieces of the 20-pesos denominations were originally struck. This statement has not been confirmed, but it is a fact that the coin is scarce.

The first of the Issues of Maximilian attracted notice because of the statement that the engravers of the pelces which show the emperor's bust have executed the design in such manner that by reversing the coin likeness of a donkey was produced. It requires a great deal of imagination, it may be said, to work out such a resemblance.

There has been an impression that all the coins of Maximilian are scarce. but this is not so. Great numbers of them were struck, and as the Mexica: dollar had for many years been a tavorite form of currency in the orient, millions of such pieces forne their way to the eastern countries during the reign of Maximilian. The idea that the one-peso piece was held at . high premium may be accounted -: sr by the rumor in general circulation about 1868 that the American government was buying up all the Maximil ian dollars at five dollars each.

There is said to be one extremely rare variety of the one peso, which was struck at the Mexican City mine in 1866. According to one story, the first dies broke after 35 pieces had been coined, and this number represented the age of Maximilian when be was shot. It was said also that one ball plerced his forehead at the exact spot where a flaw appears in the die As a matter of fact, says an expernumismatist, a die did go to pieces after a few coins had been struck, and the subsequent dies were of far in ferior workmanship. The coins of the first set are identified by the letters on the inscription of the obverse, which are shorter than those on the usual (a sues, and there is a depression in the temple of the emperor's portrait

HE CARRIED THE GOLDFISH HOME

Or, Rather, He Meant to Do It, but

Fate Was Against Him. When Clerk D. P. Conry of the West notel won a bowl of goldfish in a raffle he was the producst man in the twin cities. He bore his prize triumphantly into the hotel, and everybody admired the fish. At last someone asked them. Unfortunately, Mr. Conry had not thought of that before. It was a wet, rainy night, and the prospect of carrying home a bowl of mixec water and goldfish was not alluring. A thou at struck him.

"I'm going to give them to Louis Fay." he announced, shoving the dripping globe at his assistant. You are not," said Mr. Fay, baci 'ng away, "I don't want them." Then you just keep them for me to night," suggested Mr. Conry. "I'll be around first thing in the morning." But Mr. Fay wouldn't do that, either. unless Mr. Conry would put the fish in the safe and take a receipe. This Mr. Conry hesitated at, because he had never heard of keeping goldfish in a safe, so he tried to give the fish to each of the bellboys in turn, but without success. Then he tried the bartender, the carpenter, the elevator boys and the engineer. Nobody wanted goldfish. Finally, he had to start home with them. Few persons, however, buye ever attempted the feat of carrying a large bowl of goldfish wrapped in paper, while standing on the platform of a crowded car. Mr. Concy was shoved and pushed and jostled. And all the time he was getting wetter and wetter. "Seems to me," he said, "that this is the wettest night I ever saw."

When he got home he prepared to exhibit his prizes to an admiring cir-"I've got something here," he said, "that will almost tickle you to leath. These are the rarest specimens of their kind in the whole world. Cost $22.50 aplece, just because they were so rare." Then be unwrapped the package.

Bone Coal as Fuel.

In the tests conducted at the fuel testing plant at St. Louis, Mo., and Norfolk, Va., to determine the values of different kinds of fuel for use in the gas-producer, the United States geological survey obtained some in teresting results with a hone co. which is found in West Virginia. Although the fuel was found to be of Hi tie value under the steam boiler, it gave good results in the gas-producer. where it developed a brake horse-power for each 1.65 pounds of coal consumed in the producer. The lumps of coal were cight and ten inches in diameter. Some coal consisted of a high-grade bituminous coal, others appeared to be simply lumps of a heavy and dry hard rock. All of these lumps except the largest, burn entirely through in the producer. There is no tendency to clinker or coke, and very little stoking is required. There was a high percentage of about 45 per cent. of ash. With proper crushing and suitable attention the deposits of this fuel will prove to be decidedly valuable for noducer gas plants

English Women Are Taller. That American women are consid-

rably shorter than their English sisers was the dictum laid down by a "dies" taffor in a lawsuit-in London in which Sydney Lyons sued a Capadian dressmaker for gowns he had supplied The Canadian contended that the dresses were not "of American size." Some expects called to give testimony declared that models for gowns for English, French and American wemen are the same, but Dressmaker McKay of Toron'o averred: "The English stock size would not fit anyone in America. They might fit giraffes, but not the women of Hamilton, Ontario, The longth from the neck to waist of the American model is 14% inches and of the English 16 inches. The American shoulder seam is six inches and the English 4% inches." Unimpressed by these measurements the court gave judgment for the English dressmaker.
