MULE RAN AWAY.

Jack Hooper, who lives a few miles out in the dry farming belt was getting his team ready to bring the children to school this morning and one little girl, Berta, was already in the wagon. Mary, the oldest girl, had gone to open the gate a few rods away, and the only trouble was that Jack did not fix his lines and as Mrs. Hooper fastened the traces on the side where the mule forks, she did not wait for orders, but made ad ash for town. The little girl who was in the wagon kept her seat, Mary at the gate held out her little arms and bid the mule stop, but she kept on running so Mary got out of the way. Mrs. Hooper ran as fast as she could. Mr. Hooper fell down but was soon up. When the team came to the wire gate that opens into the road Gray Maude refused to be dragged any farther. So the little girl was rescued and no one was hurt, but the mule had not run enough so kept up the pace to town, making it here in thirty minutes.
