A WOMAN'S SORROW.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE NEVER RUNS SMOOTH.

Terrible Result of a Little Family Quar-rel--How the Parties Repented.

From the Danbury Nones. It was at this season of the year, just seven years ago, that an extraordinary scene occurred in Danbury. It was in the evening, and a couple were bringing in several pots of plants from the yard to save them from the frost which the temperature of outdoors threatened. While thus engaged she spoke, referring to a geranium sho had in her hand:

"I wouldn't lose this one for a great deal, as mother gave it to

He looked at it.

"Your mother gave it to you? Guess not. I bought that plant

"Why, it's no such thing."
"I tell you I did," he added, speaking with warmth. "And I tell you, you didn't," sho firmly asseverated. "Do you suppose I don't know what was given to me?

"Do you suppose I don't know what I bought with my own money?"

"If you say you bought that geranium," she said, speaking very slowly, and with white lips, "you say what you know to be false."
"Do you mean to say I lie?" he hissed. "If you say that, I do?"

"You shall be sorry for this," he threatened.

"Never," she retorted. He put on his hat and coat and left the house.

That was seven years ago this fall. She never saw him again, nor heard from him, in all that seven years. What must have been the thoughts, the agony of mind endured by that wretched wife in that time, no one on earth knows. She kept her thoughts to herself, and patiently, as far as outward appearance went, bore the burden put

On Frid y evening of last week her door opened, and a man walked into her presence. There was a look, a cry, and she was in the arms of her husband. What a happy home was that. All the agony of the seven long years was forgotten in that hour of reconciliation and reunion. A hearty supper was spread, and with tears and smiles she hovered about him, ministering to every want. After supper there was a long talk of the past.

speaking in one of the pauses, "that it should have happened as it did. I can scarcely comprehend it all. It seems like an awful dream. both lost our tempers, and we have both suffered for it. The miserable geranium! Do you know I cannot bear to see one of those plants? I told mother to come and take it back, for I would not have it in sight."

"What!" he ejaculated, "do you still persist in saying that she gave it to you? "Why, John, of course she did. Haven't you got over that idea

"No, I haven't," he persisted, his face darkening. "I bought that geranium just as sure as I'm a living

She thought of his years of cruel desertion, of all he had caused her to suffer because of his obstinacy, and her heart hardened, and her face flushed.

"You are mean to say that when you know it is false.' "It isn't false. It's heaven's

"It's no such thing. It's a mean, contemptible lie." He jumped up from the chair, seized his hat and coat, and shot out of the house in a flash, and she never uttered a word in protest.

She sat there with clenched hands and a white face, and let him go. And so he is gone. And to-day he is alone again with the old burden and the old pain.

At the railroad meeting held at the Carswell Institute, Anderson, the Carswell Institute, Anderson, on Thursday, resolutions were adopted by the citizens of Hall township pledging $20,000 by taxation to the building of the Anderson and Savannah Valley Railroad. Speeches were made by Messrs. W. C. Brown, J. C. C. Featherston, E. M. Rucker and perhaps others upon this subject. The road is going to be built.

BARNUM AND HAYES.

THE PRINCE OF SHOWMEN IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

The President Tells the Showman all About His Private Life.

An interesting interview occurred on Friday between the President and the great showman, P. T. Barnum. The latter, who, it will be remembered, telegraphed Hayes last spring and thanked heaven that he had been elected and counted in, called at the White House on Friday for two purposes, first, to ask the President's family to his circus, and second, to pay his respects to Mr. Hayes. He said on entering: "Mr. President, I will not disturb you. I only came to pay my respects and offer my sympathy."
"Why sympathize with me?" asked the President, at the same time saying: "Sit down, sit down." "I sympathize," said Barnun, "with anybody who holds the office of President. Of course it is a high office and all that, but I have known every President from Jackson down and they all got gray under it, except, perhaps, Grant. How well I remember poor Polk, his hair turned gray, his eye lost its sparkle, his face became pale and his body thin. They worry themselves to death." "There is no danger to me Mr. Barnum," answered the President. "I do not intend to grow gray in office." "But you can't help it," said the showman. "You make a mistake, you see it when it is too late and such things trouble you." "Well," answered the Presiyou." "Well," answered the President; "I have no doubt I have made mistakes, and I fear some serious ones, but I try to do the best I can and follow my conscience; I have no prido which can be objectionable, no pride which can be objectionable, and I will change only course when I am convinced it is wrong; my strength is in doing the best I can for the public good." The showman answered: "But you will be worried in spite of yourself. You have a troublecome question. have a troublesome question, for instance, to-day—what do you do with it? It stays in your mind and follows you into your family and into your recreation, if you take any. Your mind is at work on it at night, when you don't know it, and before you are aware you will be grayloaded." "You are mistaken there, Mr. Barnum," quickly replied the President. "I do not allow my official annoyances to follow me outside of this room. I go to my family, play with my children and forget that I am President. Nearly every day when I leave this office, usually from 3 to 4. I go for a drive, but sometimes I prefer to walk. I take with me in my carriage some pleasant gentleman, who is agreeable to me, and who I know will not talk to me of public business and politics. A long drive settles my nerves banishes the sad cases that come to me which I cannot help, and gives me an appetite for my dinner. In the evening I see many friends socially, and this is a diversion rather than a task. I am rarely troubled with politics in the even ing. Those who come, both ladies and gentlemen, are generally known to us, and they come at our invita-tion. I retire reasonably early and rise early, and so there is little danger of gray hairs in my case.' danger of gray hairs in my case.

"Will you come to my show, Mr.

President, either to-day or to-morrow?" asked Mr. Barnum, as he was taking his leave. "No," said the President, "I cannot, but the children will go." "Thank you, Mr. President," replied the showman, as he reached the door; "I may say at parting that I am very may say at parting that I am very glad to see you hero. I believe in the Republicans and am a Republi can myself. There is less cor ruption among the Republicans, Mr. President." "That is very true, Mr. Barnum," said the President, as the great showman with-
