The Secret of Youth

Do you ever wonder how you can remain young, or why other women older than you, look younger than you do? The secret can be put in a few words: "Preserve your health, and you will preserve your youth."

By "health" we mean not alone physical health, but nerve health, as, sometimes, magnificently strong-looking women are nervous wrecks.

But whether you are weak physically or nervously, you need a tonic, and the best tonic for you is Cardui.

It builds strength for the physical and nervous systems. It helps put flesh on your bones and vitality into your nerves.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"My mother," writes Mrs. Z. L. Adcock, of Smithville, Tenn., "is 44 years old and is passing through the change of life."

"She was irregular and bloated and suffered terribly. My father stepped over to the store and got her a bottle of Cardui, which she took according to directions and now she is up, able to do her housework and says she feels like a new woman." Try Cardui in your own case.

ANDERSON MUST PAY THE DEATH PENALTY.

upon an exception upon that ground, the court said:

"While such a course on the part of the trial judge is, perhaps, unusual, and possibly not to be commended, we know of no law which forbids it, and, therefore, we cannot say that there was any error of law in this respect; and to that we are confined in cases of this kind."

As no plea of justification was interposed by defendant, the alleged error of charging that there is only one form of justifiable homicide known to our law could not have been prejudicial.

Under the undisputed evidence a charge upon the law of self-defense would have been inapplicable to this case.

There was no testimony tending to show that appellant was not legally responsible for the crime committed.

The motion for a new trial for after-discovered evidence was properly refused. It was not supported by affidavit that the evidence could not, by the exercise of due diligence, have been secured in time for the trial, and, according to the statements of appellant's attorneys to the court as to the character of the alleged newly discovered evidence, it was merely cumulative. But, aside from this, the decision of the circuit court on motions for new trials for after-discovered evidence, in a law case, can not be reviewed by this court, except for errors of law.

The appellant was not sentenced "to be publicly executed," the sentence was that he be hanged "at the usual place of execution," which is fixed by statute within the county jail or the enclosure thereof. Crim. Code, Sec. 660.

The judgment of this court is that the judgment of the circuit court be affirmed, and that the case be remanded to that court for the purpose of having a new day assigned for the execution of the sentence heretofore imposed upon the defendant.

The sentence pronounced by Judge Prince, which it will be noted, was one of the exceptions in the case, was as follows:

"The defendant having been brought to the bar of this court, and having been duly arraigned for sentence, and having been asked by the clerk of this court what he had to say why the sentence of the court should not now be pronounced, and he having answered that he did not have aught to say further than had already been said by himself and counsel, the sentence of the court was then pronounced, as follows, to wit: The judgment of the law and the sentence of the court is that you, John Henry Anderson, be taken hence back to the place whence last you came and there kept in close confinement until Friday, the 23d day of April next, when and whence you shall be taken by the sheriff of the county of Laurens to the usual place of execution, and between the hours of 11 in the morning and 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, you shall be by him hanged by the neck until you are dead, dead, dead, and may God have mercy on your soul.

Geo. E. Prince, Presiding Judge."

The Motive for the Killing.

The story of the killing and the immediate events leading up to it, as told by Anderson on the stand, are in part:

"The first one that took sick was the oldest girl. Another one was the third oldest girl. I come backwards and forwards, and come to the railroad, and the house, as near as I can come at it, is about a hundred and ten or fifteen or twenty yards from the railroad. And they would come out to the railroad where I was. I asked them how they were getting along. They said they was bad off sick. My wife never did ask me in, and old man Josh didn't because he objected to my coming. None spoke to me except my own family. She stayed sick, I suppose, until about the 20th, I reckon, of July. The other one, she stayed sick as near as I can come at it, along about four weeks—never got better until way up in August. She didn't. I come backwards and forwards to see her, and several days I come down there to see her while she was sick, before they got that crop laid by, there wasn't nobody at the house but them small little children that wasn't able to do nothing at all but get some water. My wife was in the field hoeing cotton, and old man Josh was in the field ploughing, and my other two biggest children was in the field. I says to her, 'Sick as that child is, what you doing out there hoeing cotton?'—You ought to be in the house tending to that child.' I says, 'How you manage to give the medicine the doctor give you on regular time?' She says, 'About the time I think it is medicine time I stops an goes to the house.' I says, 'Then you goes back to the field?' She says, 'Yes.' I says, 'Why don't you stay at the house and tend to them?' She says, 'I have to hoe cotton.' I says, 'If you was with me don't you know I wouldn't let you work none; I would have you at the house, and take the other two children and go to work best as I could.' She says, 'Yes.' Her mother was at Waterloo then. I says, 'Where is you mother?' She says, 'At Waterloo, at Dr. Feinell's.' I says, 'Why ain't she at the house attending to them?' She says, 'I don't know.'

"I come in the corner next to the pulpit in there at that door—I was in that settlement on that side (indicating.) I come in the church and set down right at the door, and set there awhile and looked at the child in the coffin, and, of course, my heart just got away there. And I never spoke a word to nobody. I got up and went on outdoors, and I stepped on the first step out there, and I just pulled out my pistol, and he was standing at the door there, and I shot him. And then after I shot him I never snapped on him nary other time no more. He whirled and caught around a tree.

"Q. Why did you shoot him?"

"A. Because he didn't give up my family and kept them in that hobbie against me, and I had notified him if he didn't put them out I would shoot him if I met him. He told me to do it now and be done with it."

Interrogation Points.

The Sullivan township equalization board has been in session this week. Messrs Machen, Simpson and Wasson having been busy going over the returns. They find some knotty questions coming up for settlement.

First. How can a man, wife and six children cook, eat and sleep on five dollars' worth of household goods and kitchen furniture?

Second. How can a man haul provisions and guano from town, ride on Sunday in a hundred dollar top buggy, plow and make a crop with a ten dollar mule?

Third. How can a man support self and family, and pay all his debts on a three dollar per acre farm?

The board has unanimously come to this conclusion: If our people showed as much economy in their every day business as they do in making their tax returns, they would soon be the most prosperous people on earth. Tumbling Shoals, March 19.

Will Your Boy go to College?

It is natural that parents desire to give the boy or girl the benefits of a college education. The item of expense in many instances, precludes the wish.

We know of one father, who in order to fulfill his ambition for a good education for his son, has laid aside each year since the boy was ten, one hundred dollars in a savings account.

In this manner he will have provided the necessary expense money by the time the son is twenty.

A savings account can be put to any number of good uses.
