Notes. The Cynthian (N. Y.) Courier comments as follows on a recent editorial of the Democrat: "We were pleased to notice, in a recent issue of the ORANGEBURG DEMOCRAT, a warm rebuke of a neighboring journal for speaking of two northern men who were about to erect factories along the Columbia canal, as 'Yankee adventurers.' The Democrat shows sound sense, and we hope accurately reflects the better sentiment of the South."

The comic weekly Pack has an amusing cartoon representing Conkling in a state of desperation over the "Fifteen" puzzle. Each block has the face of some Presidential candidate. Grant, Blaine and Tilden representing the mystic three, 13, 15, 14. Do what he will, Conkling cannot get in the right place, Blaine or Tilden invariably coming out first at the end. Some one sent a copy of the paper to Blaine in the Senate chamber, and it excited a great deal of amusement among the Senators, with the exception of Conkling who couldn't see the joke.

For Adjutant and Inspector General.

Colonel A. D. Goodwyn, of Fort Motte, is remarkably qualified. A decided taste for military matters; a veteran in experience and training; a thoroughness in discharge of duty, added to a supreme State pride fits him for the position. The first note of war was the signal for his resignation of a lucrative office at Columbia. As a private he was present when the Star of the West was driven from Charleston. He was promoted to the Adjutancy, and served on the coast, being at the fall of Sumter, after which and among the first he went to Virginia. At first Manassas he fought as Major in the 2nd South Carolina Regiment, Col. Kershaw's. Here, if space permitted, and an invidious reference to personal efforts were admissible, an enviable chaplet might be justly added to the record of a modest hero. At Williamsburg he served as Lieut. Colonel, and in the battles around Richmond fell seriously wounded. While insensible on the ground the enemy charged over him and his men, and he was roused by the will huzzas of the temporary victors. He lay and saw the charge repulsed by a counter charge. For six months he was on crutches, and reported again for duty while disabled. He was then placed in command of the South Carolina State troops with whom he remained until the surrender. His wound will always incapacitate him for active exercise. So much for the soldier. Of some in the discharge of many duties it may well be said, "he can afford to do" thus and so; to Col. Goodwyn no such convenient excuse can be ascribed. With him duty is paramount to emolument or comfort. Sincerity dictates what he accepts as duty. His life and fortune were at his country's disposal. The first was narrowly spared, the other was swept away. No more hopeful, uncompaining and enduring soldier served in Lee's army. The end of the war brought him (as all of us) face to face with ruin; he accepted employment scantily remunerative, yet every call, (and these were many) was cheerfully met for the weal of the county and State, when he could not afford to give time or means. Courteous, hospitable, cheerful, energetic, brave, a man preferring always to know only the good in man, he combines the total ensemble of a great soldier and gentleman. Orangeburg would be proud of him as Adjutant and Inspector General; the State would have her interests jealously guarded, and a measure of reward to a faithful past would in part repay his services. Few, very few, men breathe more hopeful prayers for Carolina's future, and none perhaps did more for his State in the dark days of the past than A. D. Goodwyn.

Hon. Samuel Dibble.

We publish in to-day's issue a ticket of State officers sent us by responsible parties outside the county, not because we approve or disapprove of the honorable gentlemen named in connection with the several places; but because it gives us a favorable opportunity of withdrawing the name of the Hon. Samuel Dibble from the candidacy of Attorney General of the State. There is no gentleman within the bounds of our State whom we would desire more to see nominated for this office than Mr. Dibble. His high legal attainment, his past services to the Democratic party and unselfish devotion to every interest of the State eminently qualify him for the position; yet we are authorized to state that he is not a candidate for the office, and if nominated will not accept the nomination. Whilst pressing professional engagements will not allow even a thought of such a candidacy on his part, the party at home and abroad will have the benefit of his valuable counsel and services during the entire campaign.

Selecting Delegates.

Our readers will excuse any spirit of dictation which might seem to appear in our editorial columns. A deep interest in the welfare of the Democratic party and its ultimate success is our only excuse. Knowing the importance of unity based upon a perfect harmony between the voters of the party, we should try to destroy its elements of discord by pointing out those features in our system which, we believe, heretofore were prime causes of discontent and perhaps of projected independent movements. If there is ever to be a time when perfect unity of action should obtain, that time is the present campaign. Not only the supremacy of the party and the individual rights of the citizens are involved in its results, but the existence of the government and the future of the country depend upon the manner in which every citizen casts his vote. In the face of a strongly organized party as the Radicals of the South, composed of ignorant individuals who are controlled not by principle but by a blind devotion amounting to superstition, the Democrats of our county cannot afford to be disinclined. If they would continue the supremacy now enjoyed, or the prosperity smiling upon our people, or the benefits of an honest government, they dare not play with indecision in any shape whatever. Therefore to secure the further possession of these blessings it becomes necessary for every Democrat to make his allegiance to his party a personal duty more binding upon him than any social or business relation he may have formed. With this principle as a guide no Democrat should vote for any delegate to the County Convention for any consideration save his fitness for the office. Send men here who will represent, not the leaders of the party, but the collective yeomanry of the party—men, who will be the exponents, not of the sentiment of a faction, but of the principles of the party. Convenience ought not to be a consideration, or popularity a qualification, nor should friendship merely entitle a man to so great a trust. These are incidental while principle is the essential. The one looks to the success of the leader he serves, or the sentiment he represents; while the other desires the triumph of principle and the dominance of party. The one panders to rings or cliques and deals in trickery, while the other secures the confidence of all alike and wins the battle in a fair fight. The history of the past conventions with their countenances rings and cliques, their warm contentions and often bitter strife may be read in the records of local clubs with their criminal indifference and want of discretion in selecting delegates to represent their interest. A change is needed and the power to make it rest with the local clubs. Shall we have it, or trust the approaching convention be but the repetition of others?

A County Chairman.

There is no act required of the approaching County Convention of greater importance to the success of the Democratic party in Orangeburg County than the selection of a County Chairman. A judicious choice will infuse life into the body of the party and confidence in the breast of every individual member, whilst a bad one will be death and stagnation and a license for independence. In selecting this officer there are qualifications which if the unity of the party is to be preserved, must not be overlooked. To lead Democracy successfully through the present campaign requires a man whose record has never been stained by political contact with Radicalism, one who is identified with the masses of our people in interest and politics, and whose reputation as an organizer and persistent worker is a guarantee of a complete and glorious success. In this matter the confidence of the people must not be violated, and to secure us against such an evil, the local clubs should canvass the field, discuss deliberately the qualification and fitness of individuals and then instruct their delegations as to the course they should pursue. We would suggest the propriety of a first, second or even third choice, so that when the convention assembles, it may be readily ascertained that when agitated, the action of the convention shall be merely confirmatory of the action of the clubs. By this course rings will be shorn of their influence and trickery of its power. The people in their club meetings will have done the work, before these engines of evil have time enough to bring their force to bear upon the assembled convention. We believe the plan is not only feasible but eminently practicable and may yield the most

The Solicitorship.

We do not advocate rotation in office as a general rule, nor do we believe a frequent change of officers advantageous either as a matter of economy or efficiency. Whenever an officer proves himself efficient and worthy of the confidence of the people it is always best to retain him a reasonable length of time, but when a position must be filled by a certain class or profession, and the aspirants are all supposed to be equally competent to discharge its duties, a change is neither detrimental or unjust but absolutely necessary for the public service. In view then of the near approach of the time when State and county officers are to be nominated, it is necessary for each section to name the men whom the people desire to fill the places on the ticket and to bring their fitness for the office prominently before the public. In connection, therefore, with the office of Solicitor of the First Circuit we would suggest the name of Col. W. J. DeTreville, of Orangeburg—a gentleman in every way peculiarly fitted for the office. His unselfish devotion to the Democratic party and his long successful experience as a practicing lawyer entitle him to special consideration by those whose privilege it shall be to make up the ticket. During the last and present term this office has been filled and well filled by Mr. Jersey, of Charleston; we find no fault with his administration of its affairs, but Orangeburg claims her turn and calls upon Charleston to recognize her privilege and to aid her in filling the office with a gentleman, like Colonel DeTreville, whose legal talents and experience is an assurance that the well-being of the Circuit will suffer no detriment at his hands.

The First Gun.

The Democrats of Columbia have elected their entire municipal ticket without opposition. We congratulate the Democracy of the State upon this auspicious beginning, and hope that harmony and earnest work in our ranks will lead to a like result all over the State next November.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The fifth annual meeting of this body commenced its session in this place on Thursday last by a welcome meeting in the Presbyterian Church. A large audience being in attendance speeches were made by the visiting brethren by Rev. J. D. A. Brown, on the part of the churches; Hon. Samuel Dibble, on the part of the town and citizens and by Capt. Mortimer Glover, on the part of the Orangeburg Association. These were replied to by Messrs. G. F. Tolley, of Anderson, T. K. Cree, of the International Executive Committee, and E. W. Watkins, of Charleston.

How Watches are Made.

It will be apparent to any one who will examine a SOLID GOLD WATCH, that aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the precious metal used, is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply the necessary solidity and strength. The surplus gold is actually needless so far as UTILITY and beauty are concerned. In JAMES BOSS' PATENT GOLD WATCH CASES this waste of precious metal is overcome, and the SAME SOLIDITY AND STRENGTH produced at from one-third to one-half of the usual cost of solid cases. The process is of the most simple nature, as follows: a plate of nickel composition metal, specially adapted to the purpose, has two plates of solid GOLD soldered one on each side. The three are then passed between polished steel rollers, and the result is a strip of heavy plated composition, from which the cases, backs, centers, bezels, &c., are cut and shaped by suitable dies and formers. The gold in these cases is sufficiently thick to admit of all kinds of engraving, engraving and enamelling; the engraved cases have been carried until worn perfectly smooth by time and use without removing the gold. THIS IS THE ONLY CASE MADE WITH TWO PLATES OF SOLID GOLD AND WARRANTED BY SPECIAL CERTIFICATE. For sale by all Jewelers. Ask for Illustrated Catalogue, and to see warrant. March 12, 1880—ly
