HE GOT THE PICTURE.

The Sporting Editor Put One Over on the City Editor.

There is no more enthusiastic follower of the fistie gentry than Charlie Horan. Years ago he was sporting editor of a New York paper, which later went by the boards. During his connection with it the paper was run "upon the cheap." Penny paring was the chief occupation of the managing editor. As illustrations cost money, nothing short of a national disaster could force a picture in the paper.

Horan was a firm believer in the star of Jim Corbett, then matched to fight John L. Sullivan. One day Corbett visited New York, and Horan sent his staff out to get a photograph of the great man. None was available. Horan got angry, slammed on his hat and announced that he would get one himself. He found a full length picture in the lobby of the theater where Corbett was showing, put it under his arm and started back for the office.

In the meantime word had come to the city desk that William Windom, then secretary of the treasury, had died while addressing a dinner of the chamber of commerce in Chicago. The city editor sent his men out to get a picture of Mr. Windom. By and by Mr. Horan appeared, bearing an enormous framed picture under one arm.

"I got it," he announced cheerfully. "When I go after a picture I get it." The city editor leaped for him, seized the picture and then threw it down noisily.

"That," said he tersely, "is not a picture of the secretary of the treasury." "What do you care about the secretary of the treasury?" replied Horan defiantly. "That's a picture of the next champion of the world!"—Chicago News.

A Shakespearean Abyss.

The late Andrew Lang had many amusing tales to tell of his treatment by printers and proof correctors. In one of his articles he had quoted the Shakespearean phrase, "In the dark backward and abysm of time." When he received his proof he found a query against the word "abysm." Scribbling the word "Shakespeare" on the margin, he returned the proof, not unnaturally imagining that this would recall to the reader the quotation from "The Tempest." To his horror, Mr. Lang found when he opened the magazine containing his article that his sentence ran, "In the dark backward and Shakespeare abyssm of time."

Carlyle and the Ax.

Carlyle as a schoolmaster was a terror to evildoers. Even the biggest and boldest boys wilted when he growled out "dance" or "blockhead."

THE JOINER RUSHED IN.

He did not thrash often, as his scowl was enough to hush a whole school, but when he did thrash he meant business. One day a joiner passing along the road heard the most piteous howls and cries for mercy and help coming from the schoolhouse. Through the window he saw Carlyle doing the flogging act in his most approved and vigorous fashion. Jumping to the door, the joiner rushed in, handed his ax to the perspiring Carlyle and exclaimed: "Jist doot cotright mon, and no mince matters."

Taken at His Word.

When Rossetti was a student of art he one day happened to go with some fellow students to the east end of London. There at a wharfed inn he saw an immense canvas on the barroom wall. After laughing at it for some time and thus provoking the innkeeper's wrath the following conversation took place:

"Where did you get that picture?" "Oh, never mind, young man, where I got it!"

"What price do you set on it?" "More than you can afford."

"Indeed!" said Rossetti. "Now, how much?"

"Three thousand pounds," replied the innkeeper.

At this there was a loud burst of laughter from the young artists.

"Do you know how much I would give you for your 25,000 picture?"

"How much?" asked the innkeeper.

"Three pounds," said Rossetti.

"Done," said the innkeeper promptly. And to his amazement and amusement Mr. Rossetti found himself the owner of the colossal daub.

Summons By Publication No. 167, K. A.

In the District Court for the District of Alaska, Division No. 1.

Mattie Stanley, Plaintiff, vs. George A. Stanley, Defendant.

To George A. Stanley, defendant, greeting.

In the name of the United States of America, You are hereby commanded to be and appear in the above entitled Court, holden at Ketchikan in said Division of said District, and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled action, within 30 days from the date of the service of this summons and a copy of the said complaint upon you, and, if you fail so to appear and answer, for want thereof, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, a copy of which is served herewith, to wit, a dissolution of the marital ties and bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant.

On October 16, 1912, the above Court ordered this summons to be served by publishing same in the Daily Miner, news paper of Ketchikan, Alaska. Defendant herein is required to answer the complaint on file herein within Thirty days from the last date of Publication, to wit, within Thirty days from Friday, January 17, 1913.

And You, the United States Marshal of Division No. 1 of the District of Alaska, or any deputy, are hereby required to make service of this summons upon the said defendant and each of them as by law required and you will make due return hereof to the clerk of this Court within forty days from the date of delivery to you with an indorsement hereon of your doings in the premises.

In witness whereof, I have hereto set my hand and affixed the Seal of the above Court this 27th day of November, A. D. 1912.
