

COL. A. O. BRODIE RETURNS HOME.

He Opens the Campaign at Holbrook With a Rousing Meeting.

Col. Alex. O. Brodie of the famous "Rough Riders," and the republican candidate for Delegate to Congress opened his campaign at Holbrook on the 14th, under the most auspicious circumstances. For several days it had been known that he was returning from the east and would arrive at Holbrook Friday. On the evening of the 12th, a party, consisting of Gov. N. O. Murphy, Territorial Auditor G. W. Vickers, Chas. R. Drake, chairman of the republican territorial central committee, Judge C. W. Wright of Tucson, left Phoenix for the north to meet him. At Flagstaff they were joined by C. M. Funston, editor of the Coconino Sun, and E. S. Clark, district attorney of Coconino county. At Winslow the party was augmented by F. W. Nelson, republican candidate for district attorney for Navajo county, and J. F. Mahony, one of the members of the republican county central committee of Navajo county. The intention of the party was to meet the Colonel at Albuquerque, but No. 2 being late rendered this impossible. The party, therefore, stopped off at Holbrook with the exception of Governor Murphy and Mr. Clark who went on to Gallup, N. M., where they waited for No. 1 to arrive. Shortly after leaving Albuquerque, the colonel, yet weak from his wounds and weary from his long journey, retired to his berth in the Pullman where he slept soundly little dreaming of the surprise that morn would bring. At 4 o'clock a. m. the governor and Mr. Clark boarded the train at Gallup, but would not arouse the sleeping soldier. There is something beautiful and touching in this scene which finds response in every patriotic bosom. The belated train sped on through the night in its mad rush against time while within the chief executive of the territory sat vigil over the sleeping hero, waiting to do him homage, and in the name of the people of Arizona welcome him back to his mountain home. As the first streaks of dawn shot across the eastern skies he awoke from his peaceful slumbers, and the meeting between the soldier and his distinguished watcher was cordial and effecting. The battle-scarred veteran extended his left hand (being still unable to use his wounded right) which was warmly grasped by the governor. But few words were spoken. Hand clasped hand, eyes met eyes which spoke with the eloquence of a thousand tongues. At Holbrook they were met at the depot by the rest of the party and a throng of citizens. The morning hours were spent in meeting and shaking hands with people who had gathered from the surrounding sections to meet the famous Rough Rider. An afternoon meeting was held in the public hall which was gayly decorated for the occasion, and Col. Brodie as he was escorted to the platform by Governor Murphy was roundly applauded. On the platform were also Judge Wright, Hon. Jesse N. Smith, and C. O. Anderson who presided at the meeting. Upon his presentation to the audience, by Mr. Anderson, the Colonel was again greeted with a storm of applause. He spoke as follows: "I am pretty well tired out by the long and tedious trip, which came on top of my severe sickness, and I will not delay you long. I am not a public speaker. I have been honored by the nomination of the Republican party for delegate to congress. I have accepted the nomination, because I believe that I have the ability to fill the position and knowing the desires of Arizona, coupled with an extensive acquaintance in the east, I think I can be of some service to the territory. I accept the nomination as a sacred trust. All of my interests lie in Arizona. In helping to advance the territory, I am but helping the people. I will use my influence for the benefit of the whole territory, and not to further my personal interests.

I came to Arizona as second lieutenant in the regular army, and was stationed at Camp Apache, and the country around Holbrook is familiar to me. I resigned in 1877 to go to my mother, who was then an invalid and past recovery, and have never regretted that step. I returned to Arizona in 1888, and have resided here ever since. I am a miner and a stockman. By profession I am a civil engineer. During my life I have held many positions of trust, and I am glad to be able to say that I have filled them with satisfaction to those with whom I was connected. I have always done my duty, and if you elect me as your delegate, I will continue to do it without fear or favor.

"My opponent is Col. Wilson, whom I have always been delighted to call my friend. He is an honorable man in every sense of the word. It rests with you to decide which is best fitted to represent you. New questions are coming before the people every day. The late war has expanded the thought of the people in the line of progression. But I am not a politician, and you are perhaps better posted on the issues than I. But then there is one thing I want to speak of and that is the gallant service of the American Rough Riders. [Cheers and applause]

"At the first call for volunteer I was appointed by the Secretary of war as major, and was asked to enlist two hundred men. This was done in four days. We were first at San Antonio, and we formed the first squadron of the Rough Rider regiment. Our flag was the first American flag placed on Cuban soil by the army of invasion. Our boys were first throughout the war, and today by reason of the Rough Rider Arizona is better known throughout the United States and throughout the world than ever before.

"No credit is due me fellow citizens. I was educated by the government at the United States military academy at West Point, and it was my duty to step to the front. The rank and file of the men who went from Arizona are entitled to all the praise we can give them."

Col. Brodie paid a glowing tribute to Captain Buckley O'Neil.

Throughout his speech he was vigorously applauded, and the event will long be remembered as the most enthusiastic political gathering in Northern Arizona. Col. Brodie was followed by Gov. Murphy who made an able address. The governor is an eloquent and forcible speaker, and held his audience in wrapt attention. Judge Wright of Tucson was next introduced. He is one of the most brilliant orators in the west. At times he had his audience on the verge of tears, and at other times convulsed with laughter. The only regret of his hearers was that he did not speak longer.

To the Voters of Navajo and Apache Counties.

My delayed arrival in the territory, an earlier one having been prevented by sickness, necessitates a short campaign which will not permit my visiting the different sections and various settlements of your counties. I desire to say to you however, that I am the candidate of the Republican party for Delegate to Congress. That my long residence and business interests in the territory entitle my candidacy to your consideration. That in the past in whatever condition placed, I have conscientiously performed my duty; that in the future I shall continue to do so. That all my material interests in the world are in this territory, that in all ways if you desire to elect me as your representative shall the interests of Arizona be guarded as well as those of all citizens of the territory. Trusting that on election day you will give me your suffrage. I am yours sincerely,

ALEX. O. BRODIE.

The above letter is self explanatory. It is to be regretted that Col. Brodie is unable to visit the outlying towns and there meet and become acquainted with the people. But his aim is still giving him some trouble and he is still weak from his recent sickness. Furthermore, the time for campaigning is short and election time is close at hand. He is on account of these two urgent reasons obliged to leave off a number of places, which he under other circumstances would visit. No one regrets this more than Col. Brodie. One cannot meet this quiet unassuming man and look into his countenance without feeling that he is in the presence of a great manly soul, the very embodiment of an honest and upright man. A number of lifelong Democrats said after meeting him. "He is our man. We will vote for him. He is no politician, but a grand noble generous man, in whose hands we can safely trust our affairs at Washington."

A Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtin of Plainfield Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated by her family physician, but grew gradually worse. He told her that she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine would cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from the first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this great discovery at F. J. Watron's drug store, large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

Republican Rally at Winslow.

A grand republican rally was held at Winslow Tuesday evening. Col. Brodie of the Rough Riders was the central figure of the meeting. A large torchlight procession marching to the music of fife and drum escorted Col. Brodie and party consisting of Judge Wright, Auditor C. W. Vickers, Hon. Jesse N. Smith, F. J. Watron, Allen Hill, James Scott, C. H. Ballard, and C. O. Anderson to LaPrade's hall, where a large and enthusiastic audience greeted the far-famed soldier. Col. Brodie was wildly cheered as he was introduced to the audience, and during his able address was roundly applauded. Judge Wright delivered one of his characteristic speeches and at short intervals brought the house down with his witty illustrations with which he rounded out his points. The rally was a grand success, and the illustrious Rough Rider is capturing the votes of Northern Arizona.
