THE Apaches, where are they? Where are their signal fires, and their foot-prints? They have come and gone and their trail has been one of death. Thus far, their destination; and hiding place is as mysterious and unaccountable as is the spirit that impelled them to their carnival of blood. Weeks have passed and they have had undisputed possession of the mountains and valleys which they selected for the hellish work on which they started. The organized army of the United States has placed its most experienced soldiers on the trail of the cruel raiders, officered by men of daring and courage, yet not a Redman paid the penalty of his crime. Volunteers from various sections under command of men of known and tried courage and long experience, were also on the alert to arrest and destroy the savages. Indian scouts were hurried to the front with the confident hope of staying the work of destruction—the results were alike fruitless. Where is the remedy? The army is powerless against the murderers; volunteers were equally unsuccessful; the scouts failed, and the roving bands were satiated and left the field. Now it is known to every Indian on the reservation who are the absentees. Now let the government take care of the aged men, look after the squaws and children, order out every able-bodied Indian with orders to arrest every scoundrel who has been on this raid, and turn them over for trial and punishment. They can do it to the last man, and they should under sore penalties be made to do it. This trifling has been endured long enough.

ALBUQUERQUE voted by a large majority of her inhabitants to incorporate the new town and go into business on its own account. The wisdom or folly of this procedure will not be manifest for the next two or three years, but whichever it proves to be it is the voluntary act and deed of the majority, and we hope there may never appear a cause for regret. Since the town plats was first mapped out Albuquerque has had a most wonderful growth in population, in the great value and beauty of its buildings, both for business purposes and private residences. Its trade is now far in advance of any commercial mart in the territory, and we don't know of any town south of Denver or west of Kansas City that is its peer as a business point. There are old pilots at the helm of the young metropolis, and if they have not lost their cunning they will guide the trim little craft safely.

ALL tax-payers will commend the action of Chief Justice Howard in charging the present Grand Jury in the District Court against the custom, too long prevalent among stockmen, of having one another indicted and tried criminally over disputed titles to cattle, when such disputes properly belonged and should be settled by an action of replevin in the civil courts. Hardly a term of court passes in any county in this territory but what two or three cases of alleged cattle stealing by men previously bearing good reputations, are tried, the only result being to demonstrate the existence of a dispute between neighbors over the possession of a cow or calf, which could have been more easily and satisfactorily settled in a Justice Court, without involving the expenditure of several hundred dollars by the county in maintaining a criminal prosecution. In his charge to the Grand Jury on this subject, Judge Howard advised that body that where a reasonable doubt existed as to whether the stock in dispute belonged to either the accused or accuser, to rather ignore the charge than put the county to the expense of a trial.—Prescott Miner.

THE following are two of the most important sections, of the "Act for the protection of live stock growers," passed by the last Legislature, in reference to the marking and branding of cattle:

Sec. 5. "The ear-mark provided for in this act shall be made by cutting and shaping the ear or ears of the animal so marked; but in no case shall the person so marking any animal mentioned in this act mark the same by cutting both ears to a point, or cropping off more than one-third of either ear, and any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than three hundred dollars, nor more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than one month nor more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 9. No person shall hereafter use more than one brand or ear-mark for cattle nor more than one brand for horses or mules, but all brands and ear-marks now owned by or recorded in the name of any person in any county of this Territory, shall be and remain the property of such person, and it shall not be lawful for any other person to adopt or use the same, or for the Recorder of any county where such brands are recorded, to record the same in the name of any other person, and any Recorder violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.

The editor of the Albuquerque Journal, who speaks very contemptuously of Arizona journalism, in a "scare head" over some specials regarding the Indian outbreak says: "More Killing by the Red Savages." We think the editor ought to be thankful to the gentlemanly Apaches for furnishing him with the information. In the same heading we find "A List of Those Smitten Down by the Band," and "Other Choice Reading Matter." Now the gentlemanly critic of that paper was not very choice in the selection of his words or the manner of arranging them in this particular heading, but to say the least, in fact, the heading would indicate that the Indians had slaughtered a few people just for the purpose of furnishing the Journal with choice reading matter. We venture to say that the Albuquerque Journal is the only paper in the world, the N. Y. Herald not excepted, who has highly-painted Apache special correspondents.—Phoenix Gazette.

In our last issue we stated that Elder J. B. Milner contemplated taking a trip to Utah for his health. Now Elder Milner comes to the front and denies the statement, and says we are guessing wide of the mark. We beg the Elder's pardon for this seeming misstatement, and acknowledge that our information was derived from a very unreliable source, namely, his own paper, the Orion Era, of the 29th ultimo.

We can, after a second thought, and a little careful investigation, readily understand why the exiled bishop does not wish to again tread his native heath: in search of health.

How many Indians did Mr. Armstrong, who rails against the United States army, and his men take in during the late Indian raid? His column article is full of the cowardice of the regular army. Now write another letter Mr. B. F. A. and tell us how many Apache murderers were taken in by the volunteers and scouts.

ABOUT three months ago the HERALD had occasion to publish an article in which the name of Edmund Ellsworth figured to a considerable extent. The article in question, after mentioning the indictment found against Ellsworth for polygamy, also stated that he had been placed under two thousand dollar bonds, and had endeavored to leave the country but had been forcibly detained by his bondsmen. This statement of facts caused Mr. Ellsworth to appear in an article in the Orion Era and Deseret News, under his own signature, in which he admitted being indicted for polygamy, but in a long-winded, senseless article stated that he had never violated the laws of the United States by unlawful cohabitation, and would prove on trial in court that there was no grounds for the charge whatever. As regards to veracity and general moral uprightness he stands on par with the mass of the odoriferous followers of Brigham Young. The following article from the Prescott Courier shows his method of self vindication. What liars these Mormons be:

Edmund Ellsworth, the Mormon who yesterday, in the District Court, plead guilty to unlawful cohabitation, and received a sentence fining him $300, or in lieu thereof be confined sixty days at Yuma, has selected to serve the sixty days in the Territorial penitentiary, in preference to paying the fine.

An item has been going the rounds of the press for the past ten days regarding a statement made by a ranchman named Powell, living sixty miles north-west of Winslow, who reported that the Mormons were aiding and urging the Indians in the recent outbreak. Brother Milner in the Orion Era denies the statement and says that "the Mormons have everything to lose and nothing to gain by Indian outrages." We do not agree with this saintly follower of Joe Smith, as previous Indian outrages have always been beneficial to the Mormon people from the fact that they aid these red-handed assassins and get their share of the plunder as was evidenced in the Mountain Meadow massacre. About five years ago the Mormons through their highbinders Lot Smith, Ammon Tenney, Ernest Tietjen, Jacob Hamblin and Brothers Farnsworth and Christiansen used all available means to induce the Navajo Indians to go on the war path and drive the gentiles from the country, and at that time caused a feeling of uneasiness among these quiet, industrious people, which came near ripening into warfare, but was averted by the timely interference of the military.

It is not conscientious scruples, but fear, that keeps these hired assassins of the Mormon church from plying their bloody vocation at the present day.

AMASA LYMAN was an Apostle of the Mormon Church, and for a season was first counsellor of Joseph Smith. At last, however, in 1870, he preached a sermon in which he said something about atonement which excited the wrath of Brigham Young, and he had him excommunicated. He was one of the brightest and truest men that ever belonged to the organization. Shortly after he was fired out of the church he was stopping at the house of Abram Taylor in the 11th ward of this city, where he was called upon by a prominent apostate from the Mormon Church, who said to him: "Brother Amasa I want to ask you two leading questions. Were you acquainted with Joseph Smith?" "Yes," was the reply. "I knew him personally, I have been with him under many different circumstances; have travelled and slept with him. I know him almost as well as a brother." At this the questioner asked: "Did Joseph Smith receive a revelation from God in regard to polygamy?" Lyman was absorbed in thought for several minutes, then looking up, he slowly said: "That revelation was got up for the purpose of covering Joseph Smith's iniquities, for he met me on the streets of Nauvoo the winter before the revelation was received, and told me that he then had four wives." This was the thoughtful testimony of one of the nearest friends that Joseph Smith ever had, and one of the most honorable and sagacious men who ever belonged to the Mormon Church. Is such a revelation received under such circumstances, worth keeping a whole people in doubt, perplexity and trouble over?—Salt Lake Tribune.

THERE is some fear expressed that the work on the Prescott branch railroad may be obstructed by parties claiming the right of way as against the Company just organized for immediate work. We hope not.
