FAIRY UMBRELLAS.

HE wet East wind had called to the rain,
"Come down, little drops, to the April flowers,"
And over the grass and the sleeping grain, and into the street they swept in showers. They tapped at each door and called, "Come un! Arbutus is lifting her perfumed cup, And the grass is carpeting all the lawn."

But the fairies that lived in the quiet wood
All wore their new spring bonnets that day,
So they raised their umbrellas as quick as they could. And under the trees went trooping away. And the people sald, when they saw them there, The fairy umbrellas out in the rain, O, Spring has come, so sweet and so fair,
For there are those odd little toadstools again."

MADGE.

Written for THE MORNING CALL. ELL, mother dear, I'm in the deuce of a scrape if the Governor wont help me. I don't know how I am to get out of it."

"Oh, Herbert, your father is bitterly angry with you. He says he has already paid your debts twice and wont do so again. Why wont you be sensible and propose to Madge? I am sure she cares for you, so you need not fear a refusal, and her fifty thousand pounds would smooth all diffi-"Yes, yes, little mother, but then I may as well confess, I am awfully in love with Gwen Rivers. She is the only woman I should ever care to make my wife." " My son, do you for one instant imagine Gwen would marry you? She knows the world we live in thoroughly, and knows that without money it is useless to try and keep in the swim. Can you realize Gwen living in a tiny house, in an unfashionable neighborhood, with one maid of all work? Fancy Gwen without her Worth dresses and her season in Paris. No, no, Bertie, love in a cottage with Gwen Rivers would not be a success; believe me." "But, mother, Madge, with all her money, is a terrible pill to swallow. She is so dowdy and uninteresting. Those goody women are such terrible bores, you know.' "Now, Herbert, for once be sensible. Madge adores you, I know. To-night, at Constance Fairfax's ball, propose to her and make us all happy. I can do nothing more for you with your father. He has had some heavy losses lately connected with those mines, and positively declines to advance you another sixpence. Do you dine at home to-night?"

"No, I think the less the Governor and I see of each other in the present crisis of affairs the better. I will meet you at Constance Fairfax's ball, and try and screw my courage to the sticking place. Ta-ta,

"Au revoir, my boy; for all our sakes try to be sensible.' The speakers were Lady Standish and er only son, Herbert, Captain Standish, the greatest flirt and favorite of his day. Poor Lady Standish did not look a very happy woman, though she was surrounded by every luxury, and her pretty drawingroom was filled with flowers, and the brilliant May sunshine came softly through the olive satin curtains. "I must talk to Madge and tell her what trouble we are in, and how she can help us," she said, slowly walking to the bell and ringing it. When the footman answered the hell she said. man answered the bell she said: "Ask Miss Trevor if she will come here to me for a few minutes, Johnson."
"Yes, my Lady."

Johnson returned presently with this message from Madge: "Miss Trevor begs you will excuse her, my Lady, as she is suffering from a very bad "Is Miss Trevor's maid with her?"

"No, my Lady, Miss Madge begged that she might not be disturbed by any one." 'Very well, that will do. When the footman had closed the door Lady Standish sank back wearily in her Lady Standish sank back wearily in ner chair. After all, she thought, perhaps it would be better not to say anything to Madge. She was sure she cared for Herbert, and there was not much fear of her refusing him. If Herbert would only leave off flirting with Gwen Rivers and devote himself to Madge everything would come right.

poor Madge was lying on her couch sobbing as though her heart would break. She had overheard Herbert's unfortunate words, "Madge is such a bitter pill to swallow." She had been passing through the second drawing-room when those words arrested her attention. Poor little Madge; from a child she had worshiped Herbert Standish, who had alternately teased and petted her, and was now a girl of 18. She petted her, and was now a girl of 18. She thought no one in the world could compare with him. Madge Trevor was Sir Godfrey Standish's ward, and had lived in his house since the death of her father, some twelve years before, and of whom she had scarcely any recollection. Her mother had died at her birth. She had always been very happy at the Standishes', Lady Standish having treated her as her own daughter.

It had been Mr. Trevor's dying wish, expressed to Sir Godfrey on his death-bed, that if possible a marriage should be arranged between Herbert and Madge, so that Sir Godfrey had felt he was not acting dishonorably in trying to secure Madge and her fortune for his son. When Marie knocked at Madge's door an hour later, she found her mistress seated at the tollettable with her jewel-box open before her.

"Marie, to-night I will wear that maize

"Marie, to-night I will wear that maize tulle that Worth sent last week and my carved amethysts. And Marie, you may dress my hair in that new way you spoke "And will mademoiselle wear her dress decollete? Quel bonheur, mademoiselle ought never to cover up those beautiful shoulders and arms."

It had hitherto been one of Madge's fancies to cover her neck and arms, and never to wear any jewels. Her theory was that a plain girl ought to dress as simply and unobtrusively as possible, not realizing that the ngliest can be made at least nice. that the ugliest can be made at least nic ooking with the aid of dress. had left the school-room, hence Marie's delight at the order to make the best of her dinner. I will wear that simple white silk, as we shall be alone." When Madge entered the drawing-room half an hour later, she found both Sir God-frey and Lady Standish there. The former looked in one of his worst tempers. As Madge came in, he turned to Lady Standish and said:

"Well, madam, does your son intend to night?"
"No, dear Godfrey, Herbert is dining with one college friends; he will meet us at Constance Fairfax's ball later."
"Why don't you say the truth that he is at the club gambling; but remember, not another penny does your son get from me, even to save the Standish name from dis-Sir Godfrey had a way of ignoring his share in Herbert's existence whenever he was offended with him, which, unfor-tunately, occurred pretty often. Dinner that evening was a dismal failure, Sir Godfrey keeping up a running fire of growls as every fresh dish was presented to him. Madge was infinitely relieved when Lady Standish gave the signal to retire, and ran up to her room for the first time feeling ex-cited at the prosject of a ball. She found Marie waiting for her with her dress and jewels spread out on the bed.

and Marie drew the cheval glass in front of Madge, exclaiming: "Look, mademoiselle, are you not satis-fied?"

Madge was almost startled the change Madge was almost startled the change was so great. She saw in the mirror a girl with a pure white complexion, bright red lips and wistful hazel eyes; her soft brown hair was arranged in little curls all over her forehead and plied high on her head. Her beautiful shoulders gleamed white out of the folds of maize tulle, which was caught up here and there with violets. Could Worth have seen her he would have feit the figure is that the cast was made by a left-handed, cross-eyed man, and the Goddess is left-handed. The scales should have been held in the left hand, and the sword with which the Goddess is supposed to defend the scales should have been grasped in the right hand, with which it would naturally be wielded.

The Palouse City News (Wash.) says: Worth have seen her he would have felt

"Marie, do I look well?"
"Ah, ciel, mademoiselle, you are lovely.
I always told mademoiselle she only wanted careful dressing to look pretty."
"You flatter me, I am afraid, Marie; but come, give me my clock. I day Stradish come, give me my cloak; Lady Standish must be waiting." "Madge, dear child, how charmingly Marie has dressed your hair. I never saw you look so well," said Lady Standish when Madge entered her boudoir.

"I am glad, Aunt Car. Shall we start ing my favorite. You know how passionately fond of dancing I am, and Strauss is always so perfect."

"I wish I dared ask you for every one of your waltzes to-night. Wont you let me write my name down for all?"

"I think that would be almost too much," laughed Madge; "but you may have all but three. I don't know what Aunt Car will say."

"Let us hope Lady Standish will be merciful and remember the days of her youth." Cecil Gordon and Madge made a pretty picture as they walzed. They both danced perfectly, and Cecil made every woman he danced with look well. The plainest girl in the room gained grace if she were dancing with him ing with him.
"See, Captain Standish, how well Madge Trevor looks to-night."
"Poor little Madge. Ah! Miss Rivers, one can have eyes for no one else when you "Do you know I'm getting awfully tired of those sort of speeches?"

"Miss Rivers, let us go into the conservatory; I have something to say to you."

"Very well; but you must bring me back for the next dance.

SEA AND SHORE.

Arrival of the Shipwrecked Crew of the Cassie Hayward.

Accident on the British Ship Strathearn-The Hospodar Has Sailed at Last From Rio de Janeiro-A New Yacht.

The barkentine City of Papeete, Captain Rosenlund, arrived yesterday, 37 days from Tahiti, and will dock to-day at Steuart street to discharge. Among her cargo were 50,000 cocoanuts, 79 bags edible fungus, 880 sacks copra, 17 bags beche de mer, 91 sacks coffee, 180 bags pearl-shells, a quantity of vanilla and 6 sacks mail.

Among the passengers were Captain Piltz, Chief Officer Hyman, Second Officer Anderson and the steward of the schooner Cassie Hayward, which was wrecked in the South Seas some time ago, as was reported by the Mariposa from Australia. Captain Piltz makes the following report: The schooner Cassie Hayward was chartered by Captain Piltz for a trading cruise to the South Sea Islands, and sailed from San Francisco on December 13, 1889, for Tahiti, with a cargo of lumber for A. Crawford & Co., and merchandise for Raratonga on captain's account. Arrived at Tahiti after a 30 days' passage, and after discharging sailed on January 20th for the Harvey Group and arrived at Ra ratonga on January 25th.

THE ANCHORS WOULD NOT HOLD. The wind was northeast with very heavy surf; was unable to enter the port on account of very heavy sea, but finally made it on January 27th. Discharged a portion of the cargo and sailed on January 31st for the tsland of Mangain. Sighted the island on February 3d, and laid off and on until the 4th, when it fell calm and the vessel drifted ashore with both anchors down. The anchors would not hold on account of the coral reef being too soft.

We tried to tow her off with two boats containing the vessel's crew and native passengers and a canoe from the shore. There was a heavy sea on the reef, and therefore we could not prevent the schooner from going ashore. At 7 o'clock in the evening the crews in the boats went ashore on the reef, and those on board had to scram-ble ashore the best way they could. At 11 o'clock the captain left, and shortly after-ward the vessel broke into pieces and became a total wreck. ACCIDENT ON THE STRATHEARN.

The British ship Stratheam left the sea-wall yesterday and towed to Port Costa. Shortly before leaving an attempt was made to hoist into position the lower main topsail yard, which had been lowered on deck for repairs. The catfall with triple sheave blocks was used to hoist. When the yard was a few feet above the deck the upper block canted, the check gave way and the rope worked out of the sheave. The yard came down by the run, and falling across the donkey boiler-house, smashed the deck and steam-pipes and did considerable damage.

The weather was cloudy at Point Lobos yesterday. Early in the morning the wind was light from the west. At 9 o'clock it veered to the northwest and continued from that quarter all day, blowing at a o'clock in the afternoon at the rate of 28 miles an hour. The barometer read: At 8 o'clock in the morning, 30.08; noon, 30.08; 5 o'clock in the afternoon, 30.03. The schooner Garcia, lying at Mission-street bulkhead, had her flag flying at half-mast yesterday on account of the death of Captain Jespersen's little girl.

The British ship Hospodar, Captain Newson, left London for this port 294 days ago with a cargo of general merchandise consigned to Meyer, Wilson & Co. On December 27th she put into Rio de Janeiro with rigging damaged and the captain sick. New rigging was sent for to Liverpool, and the owners sent out another captain to take command. THE STOCK MARKET. Trading in stocks showed another falling off yes_ terday morning. Prices as a rule were lower, Potosi selling down to $3, Chollar to $3, Belcher to $2, Crown Point to $2 35 and so on. Commonwealth, which was higher Saturday, continued to rise, touching $3 50, but the other Tuscaroras showed no particular life. It is reported that a contest for the control of Commonwealth at the annual meet-ing in May has been begun, and this may explain the advance in the stock.

In the afternoon call the downward tendency in most stocks was more pronounced. Choliar declined to $2 85, Potosi to $2 80, Mexican to $3 05 and Norcross to $2 30. Several stocks were stronger, however. Belcher rose to $2 20 and Jacket to $2 55. Commonwealth continued to advance, touching $3 65. After the call some of the list braced up and closed at an advance. Choilar and Potosi closed at $3. The other stocks were 5c higher or lower at the close. Trading in local securities was more active than for some time. The Powder stocks were weaker. There was a sale of Giant Powder at $74, the first for a long time. Omnibus Cable was higher at $79 75 bid. Con. Cal. & Va. shipped to mill last week 2828 tons ore, assaying $21 50 per ton, and has $12,000 in bullion on hand. Alta produced 243 tons, assaying $18 25; Norcross, 1050 tons, $20, and has $24,000 in bullion on hand; Savage, 455 tons, $24, and has $18,000 in bullion on hand. Ore assaying $25 to $30 is reported in Chollar. On the 930-foot level in the Potosi Mine, bunches of good ore are reported, with assays at $19. The Virginia Chronicle says about the discount of silver: "Superintendent Keating estimates that the discount of silver has resulted in a loss of $500,000 to Savage and Hale & Norcross shareholders during the past three years-a sum exceeding the operating expenses of those mines for that period. The total loss to shareholders in the discount on silver from the bullion yield of the Comstock lode during the past four years exceeds $4,220,000."

Con. Cal. & Va. has shipped $54,072 to the Carson Mint. The mine produced during the first six months of the current fiscal year $1,309,707, of which $270,000 was paid out in dividends. The March product was $246,148, of which $113,719 was gold and $132,429 sliver. The average March yield was $19 96 per ton, a falling off of nearly $2.

COLLAPSED INGLORIOUSLY.

The Movement for Shorter Hours Among Fruitmen.
The movement for shorter hours that it was hoped would have come into operation among the fruit and vegetable dealers on April 1st has not proved a success. As a matter of fact, the whole thing has ingloriously collapsed. It was supposed, after a canvass of the trade, that a friendly understanding would trade, that a friendly understanding would have been possible, whereby the opening hour would have been fixed for 6 o'clock in the morning instead of at any and every hour of the night, and that in addition to closing sharp at 6 o'clock in the evening on ordinary days, Saturday afternoon might have been secured as a half holiday. A lack of harmony in the trade, however, prevented this. So long as any stores are opened at the old hours, even those strongest in favor of the reform are forced, in self-defense, to follow suit. As things stand now, the general complaint seems to be that the irregularity of hours is even more confusing than it was before the agitation took place.
