Mr. Anderson is now reported as saying that he is going to have every block experted, and for that he could control the publication of the that purpose will employ the best men that can be obtained, and as many of them as may be necessary. In this way there will be two canvassers, one to make mistakes and one to correct them. Possibly this farcical manner of doing business may lead to a consideration of the proposition to do away with the school census entirely. The records of the School Department should serve as a basis for the division of the State School Fund among the counties and as a guide to the increase of children in the State. Unless the State Con vention should see fit to sit down upon Mr. White he must be regarded as the probable the field and the question is thus presented to the people of the State at large whether they want to be in part represented in the the vital question of State unity are unknown and suspected of being unsound. We observe that a contemporary, the Chronicle, which claims to be Republican is disposed to smooth Mr. White's path to the Senate much in the same way that it to carry out any project which they may con-ceive. To oppose a man for having expressed himself in favor of State division would be about as senseless a proceeding as it would for the Southern California delegates to array themselves against a man because he was opposed to cutting the State in two. The whole subject should be dropped. This way of looking at the case may suit the Chronicle, but it will not commend itselt to the people of Northern and Central California. It is not true that the people of Southern California have a right to take any legitimate steps to carry out any protemplates the destruction of the common wealth of which they are members. And it is the right and duty of the north and central portions of the State to stamp out any such projects by ostracizing candidates who are striving to be elected on such an issue secretly manipulated. The slave-owners right to try to carry out their project to divide the country just as the southern demagogues claim the right to try and divide the State, but the North thought differently and put them down, though they had a back log in the shape of State sovereignty, which the Los Angeles seces-It is not believed that any considerable

There is not any probability that the people of the north and center of the State. if they realize the annoyance of the effect of Mr. White's possible election to the Senate, will help him on his way by electing a Legislature that would choose him. Still it is dangerous to indulge in political prophecy, for Mr. White may impose himself or party as a forced conclusion. If so, it will be well for Democrats to remember that the campaign this fall will be fought with the eyes of the people open to a possible sectional issue-the partisans of secession on one side, and those who insist that California shall remain one and indivisible

FILIBUSTERING.

The Chronicle in its eagerness for sensation got caught with a silly story of a project to invade Lower California and wrest it from Mexico. Projects of this character should be considered in their relation to the chances of realization. Men are not in this prosaic age, when it is the principal object of both lawful and lawless enterprises, going to invest in a movement that has not one chance in a thousand of success. Supin overrunning Lower California and establishing an independent government over the would have an account to settle with both to bear whatever force was necessary to accomplish that purpose. The faith of the Government is pledged to Mexico that no annexation or filibustering schemes shall be tolerated. Faith in this matter will be kept, for the conscience of the American to the date of the conscience of the American to the conscience of the American to the conscience of the American to the conscience of the American that the country stores.

> scheme. LAYING THE FOUNDATION. The Chronicle is evidently excited over the article in Friday's CALL in which the assertion is made that according to Butler's testimony in the Arnold case "Garness had the run of the Examiner office and was in easy communication with the Chronicle office." In a somewhat heedless and vehement manner the Chronicle declares this assertion a lie. Since the Chronicle has the hardihood to deny the part one of its employes played in concocting the scandal, it becomes our duty to refresh its memory. In the report of the proceedings in the Ar-nold case published on Wednesday, Butler testified that Garness wanted an article written on a subject-matter in Colusa. Butler wrote a small item of about five lines. Garness said: "That is fine; I wish I could de that. Now, I will give you $5 if by nine colored citizens of that State you will get that in the paper to-night." It praying Congress to appropriate $72,000 is not in evidence that Garness said what to enable them and their families to paper, but shortly after the "small item" appeared in the Chronicle. It is as follows:

The Colusa Sun declares that a White Cap organization has been mailing skull and cross-bone notices in that city, and that one man is waiting for a promised visit with four men armed with of the Government to make this appropria-Winchester rifles. The Chronicle says that Mr. Henderson admits that Butler, with whom he had a the same extent for all other colored perprevious acquaintance, brought him the "small item." It appears therefore that an to get in "the" paper very easily got into the Chronicle. To this extent at least the conclusion of THE CALL that Garness was in easy communication with the Chronicle office is justified. Mr. Henderson, an employe of the Chronicle, accepted without apparent hesitation an item that Mr. Garness was anxious to have published. The foundation was thus laid for the story which Garness proposed to have published in the Chronicle unless Mr. Arnold would 'bid high" for its suppression. Mr. Butler continued his testimony, passing over from the 19th of April, when this "small item" appeared in the Chronicle, to the 10th or 12th of May. On about that date Garness showed Butler the October circular. Garness then might be made. We quote from the Alta's report: Garness wanted witness to go to Mr. Hender son of the Chronicle and state that he was the man who gave in the article which appeared in the paper (the Chronicle) in April. Witness (Butler) was to say there was a good story in that Colusa affair. He was to offer to go to Colusa at his own expense and the Chronicle could pay him for the article after they accepted it. * * * Witness was to go to Colusa and make his presence and the object of his visit as public as ossible. Garness said if this method was confer a favor by notifying this office of the adopted some one would come around to get the matter hushed up, probably John Boggs, or even Arnold himself. Witness was told that they would come round and try to buy him off to suppress the publication. Witness was to appear to refuse their importunities and to assert that he was the authorized correspondent of the Chronicle. Garness said they would, without doubt, continue their efforts to suppress the article, and offer to pay liberally to accomplish their design. Witness was instructed to say article, and to take as much as he could get, but not less than $5000.

unfolded a plan by which some money

Now, if we consider the fact that Butler easily got one "small item" into the Chronicle, and that Garness selected the Chronicle as the most effective disseminator of the story he proposed to have written, or, at least, as the sheet which would make the greatest impression on Arnold and his friends, the conclusion is entirely warranted that according to Butler's testimony Garness was in easy communication with the Chronicle office. In selecting a vehicle for the publications of a scandal two conditions rolls and the average attendance. The | had to be avoided: First, not to select paper so completely given up to scandal and the distribution of the State fund. With blackmail that no one pays attention to this basis the School Department and par- | what it says; and second, not to select one ents would combine to make the average as | whose character and previous history were high as possible. The present practice of assurances that scandal would not appear in why the Examiner would not do and why the Chronicle would. The Examiner much too common, and while the Chronic has been more cautious of late years than it was at one time, the history of the sheet certainly affords no assurance that it would not publish a scandal if the price asked for suppressing it should be refused.

TO DESTROY COMMERCE.

A local contemporary, which has been goaded into saying something to assure Democrats that it has not gone over to the Republicans, defines the McKinley bill as a bill to destroy commerce. "The McKinley bill," says our contemporary, with new-born zeal, "deliberately aims to kill the remnant of commerce that keeps us in touch with the world, that saves us from stagnation and decay, and that sustains the existence of San Francisco, New York and other seaport cities." The McKinley bill is framed on the principle of all other protective tariffs. That principle is that it is good policy for this country to produce such raw material as it can, and to work as much of that raw material as possible into finished goods. Any tariff bill framed on the protective principle aims to build up home in-dustries. The tariff bill which put a heavy duty on steel ralls might with equal truth have been termed a bill to destroy commerce. We had been importing all our steel rails from Europe and paying for them partly in such raw material as we produced and partly in money. A sufficient duty built up the industry in this country, and to that extent destroyed foreign commerce. Instead of sending our surplus product of gold and silver to pay for imported rails we made the rails at home. That is the kind of destruction of foreign commerce which the McKinley bill proposes to continue. Foreign commerce may be profitable or unprofitable, according to prevailing conditions. To England it is profitable. Several millions of laboring men and women find occupation in working the raw material which England imports into the finished goods which England exports. A dollar paid for raw material brings ten dollars in the form of finished goods. But the foreign commerce of the United States consists largely in selling cotton, breadstuffs, meat and other products of the earth at prices which barely enable the producer to live and in buying high-priced finished products. The protective tariff has built up our home industries somewhat at the expense of our foreign commerce. One evidence of the good results of this prin-ciple is found in the fact that the United States has in the last twenty-five years become the richest nation in the world. This wealth has not been acquired by buying and selling with other nations but in developing our own resources. Experience has shown that in certain industries the selves over the story of a filibustering expedition to capture Lower California are not posted in the ways that are dark and the tricks that are vain on this Coast. Of course the story was made out of whole cloth. There was no filibustering party; nobody planned a raid on the southern peninsula; the generals and the privates and the commissaries and the gunners were all men of buckram, evoked out of the exuberant fancy of a reporter. The tale was a roorback of the finest water. But why should it have found circulation in the columns of our amiable contemporary, the Chronicle? What had that paper to gain by giving publicity to a canard which was certain to be exploded in so short a time? The answer to that riddle is not hard to find. On the very hour that Lower California passed into American hands real estate in the peninsula would rise-perhaps double in value. Lots in Ensenada, now hard of sale at any price, would become territory thus taken possession of, they property. people is back of it. A great many things | and neatest real estate operation of modern times. The promoters of the scheme would probably realize a handsome sum. That Governor Waterman and General Vandever had this scheme in view when they took ground in favor of annexation it is impossible to say. Perhaps they were innocent tools of parties earlier than they. But it is not to be supposed that so astute a journalist as the editor of the Chronicle allowed himself to be used by the promoters of the scheme without a clear understanding that there was to be an equitable division of the boodle. Our contemporary rarely engages in enterprises in which money is lying around without seeing to it that he gets his share. His idea is that the best sort of public spirit is that which involves public gain, and that the noblest form of charity is that which begins at

OUEER PETITION.

A week or two ago Senator Butler of South Carolina presented a petition signed praying Congress to appropriate $72,000 emigrate to Liberia and live for slx months. There were sixty-three dependents who would be provided for by the appropriation. The sum each asks for is. therefore, just $100. Admitting the power tion, there would be no escape from its obligation to provide in the same way and to sons who might like to go to Liberia and live six months at the Government expense. item which Garness gladly paid five dollars | As the colored population of the United States is not much less than 7,000,000, the cost of deporting them would be about $700,000,000. This may be termed one of the fool propositions that come before Congress. It is not worse than the fool appeal which went from San Francisco about the same time asking for Government aid. These antics may possibly be attributed to the talk about the surplus. People have got an idea that there is more money in the United States Treasury than there is room for. People in search of help, whether in the name of charity or justice, should bear in mind that except in cases where service has been rendered the Federal Government, the local authorities are the proper source of supply.

ANOTHER DUKE OF CLARENCE.

Immemorial usage has so strong a hold on the British mind that it is perhaps no matter of wonder that Queen Victoria should have created her grandson Duke of Clarence. Superstition might have warned her against reviving a title round which so many dark memories cluster But it did not sway her. Not even the unseemly record of the last Duke of Clarence, who became King as William IV, and left a family of children who float through the world under such odd names as Fitz Clarence, and the like, availed to prevent her reviving the ill-omened title.

English history records the story of a few good Clarences-not many, but a few; on the other hand the great bulk of the English-speaking people of the world connect the title with the wretched Prince who was murdered in the tower by order of the Duke of Gloucester. That was the Prince whom Shakespeare, in one of his sublimest flights of fancy, paints in the dream which was "lengthened after life," when he saw his past in a vision:

The first that there did greet my stranger soul
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick,
Who oried aloud—what scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?
And so he vanished! Then came wandering by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood, and he sirrieked out aloud,
Clarence is come—false, fleeting, perjured Clarence,
That stabbed me in the field near Tewkesbury!
Selze on him, turies! Take him to your torments!

Her Majesty must have good grit to name her grandson after so agreeable a personage.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Senator Hawley, during the debate over the Naval Appropriation Bill, made quite an impression in the Senate by picturing ne delenseless condition of our coast, and advocating liberal appropriations for the navy. In advocating the same policy Admiral Porter recently declared that the navy actually needed during the next score of years twenty-eight sea-going battleships, twenty-eight coast-defense vessels, fifty 5500-ton cruisers, forty gun-boats of 1800 tons, fifty large torpedo-boats and the of the Census to take the office of Land Register. usual small vessels essential for a navy They would cost a good deal, but the very valuable interests to be guarded warranted

The fact that Carlisle's credentials have been presented to the Senate naturally gives rise to speculation regarding the Democratic leaders in the House. It is probably the general opinion that Mills should succeed Carlisle on the Committee on Rules, that W. C. P. The Service Pension Bill which Ingalls recently introduced in the Senate by request gives all survivors of the late war 11, 1861, a pension of 1 cent a month for every day's service and the widows of soldiers or sailors and their orphan children $12 and $4 a month, respectively. Any exsoldier or sailor or widow possessed of property worth $8000 is excluded from the benefits of the measure.

The following circular has been issued by J. H. Journeymen Stair-Builders' Union will hold their regular weekly meeting at 927 Mission st., TUESDAY EVENING, May 27th.

J. H. TIETJEN, President.

A. J. CRAWFORD, Secretary.

Dobinson, President of the Handel and Haydn Society:

In accordance with a unanimous resolution passed at a meeting of the members of the Handel and Haydn Society, held on the 8th of May, 1839, it was the sense of the members that the public should be appeared to (through its President) to give their aid as associate subscribing members.

The institution of the society dates back as early as 1866, and its incorporation to 1873. Since the latter year San Francisco for some time stood alone among the great cities of the United States without a choral society worthy of its size and advancement. The Handel and Haydn Society claims to have supplied this want, as evidenced by its large and weil-trained chorus and the various oratorios and other works of the great masters which have from time to time been produced.

To extend its usefulness and further encourage the society in the production of new works, the support of the music-loving public is absolutely necessary, and you are earnestly solicited to add your name as subscriber thereto.

To carry on efficiently the work of the society three hundred subscribing members at $10 per annum are needed. Each subscriber will be entitled to two reserved seats for each concert given during the season, and it is the desire of the society to have as early a response to this appeal as possible in order that rehearsals may not be unnecessarily delayed.

The society is not formed for speculation or pecuniary gain, but has for its sole cause at heart the cultivation of the higher class of music, in which the metropolis of the Pacific, it is hoped, will lend a helping hand by liberal response from its residents.

Funds will be received by W. H. Ta ylor, the Secretary, Pioneer Building, or by Willian The Single Tax Society Meets This (SUNDAY) EVENING at 909½ Market st. JOSEPH LEGGETT will speak upon "Our Alms, and the Means of Attaining Them." Admission free.
