Rev. E. B. Spaulding, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, then advanced to the front of the platform and read that portion of the burial service from the twentieth chapter of First Corinthians, beginning with the words: "Now is Christ risen from the dead." With becoming ceremonies the funeral services of the late King Kalakaua were conducted yesterday afternoon at Trinity the westernoon Church. For the first time in the dead." history of the United States a King had died on the soil of the great American republic, and it was considered fitting that the body should be given every honor commensurate with the importance of the occasion.

Representatives of the Federal, State and Municipal Government vied with each other in making the scene one long to be remembered by those who witnessed it, while the Knights Templar, of which the King was a conspicuous member, paid their last tribute of respect to his memory. It is safe to say, in fact, that no funeral in San Francisco ever attracted more universal attention or was conducted with more pomp and splender. Everything contributed to add to the public interest, and the people of Hawaii may well feel proud of the splendid tribute paid to their dead monarch.

SIMPLE DECORATIONS.

Inside the church but little attempt at decoration had been made, the chancel alone having been beautified for the occasion. The mellow light that stole in through the stained glass windows lighted up the interior but dimly, and revealed a scene that was at once impressive and solemn in its very simplicity. Back of the bier, which stood in center of the chancel, two large silken flags, the one of the United States and the other the royal banner of Hawaii, hung side by side in graceful folds, while in front of the elevated platform a row of tropical plants in boxes extended from side to side, the dark green of their glossy leaves standing out in bold relief against the red, white and blue background. Palms and ferns were profusely distributed about the platform, and at the head of the bier, elevated so as to be plainly within the view of all, was a huge crown of white and purple chrysanthemums. emblems of purity and royalty.

SENT BY THE NOBLES. Co nspicuous, however, in all the array of plants and flowers was a large floral piece of peculiar beauty sent by the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. It represented a large panel, resting upon a green easel, and bearing in letters of violets, upon a field of white tuberoses, the word "Islam," while below, worked also in violets, were the scimeter and crescent, symbols of the order.

Slowly the spectators entered, and nearly an hour was consumed in filling the auditorium. Shortly before 1 o'clock ex-Mayor Pond, clad from head to foot in severe black, entered quietly by a side door and passed to a seat well forward and near the center aisle. A moment later he was joined by D. J. Staples, J. B. Stetson and C. B. Stone, close upon whose heels came Admiral George Brown, accompanied by Captain Remy of the cruiser Charleston, Flag-Lieutenant Dyer and Lieutenant Blow, their brilliant uniforms lending color to the scene. Very few were yet in the seats, and as Senator A. P. Williams, Morris M. Estee, C. F. Crecker, Dr. Woods, T. J. L. Smiley, Thomas O'Brien and other wellknown men passed in from time to time they instantly attracted the attention of those present.

The crowd steadily increased in size until at 1 o'clock, the hour set for the commencement of the services, it must have numbered many thousands. The sidewalks on both sides of Post street, from Powell to Grant avenue, were packed with a crowd so dense that people were unable to stir. Spectators covered the roofs and filled the windows of all the houses in the vicinity from which the entrance to the church was visible. These were the envy of the less fortunate individuals who were being GOLDEN GATE COMMANDERY. A few minutes after 1 o'clock Golden Gate Commandery, Knights Templar, un-der command of Colonel Edwards, entered in a body, and in column of twos passed fortunate individuals who were being crushed and jammed on the pavement bedown the central aisle. At a signal they toak their seats to the right, and fifty swords rung upon the floor of the church as they settled into their places. As a token of mourning they held their white-plumed hats upon their right shoulder.

THE FUNERAL CORTEGE

Solemn March of an Imposing Military Escort.

Regular Troops, National Guardsmen, Knights Templar and Others Follow the King's Remains.

By 2:20 o'clock, when the doleful tones of Trinity's bell pealed the signal that the servdeath came as the result of Adam's sin, but philosophy to-day teaches us a different story. We now know that in the remote ices within the church were concluded, the funeral pageant was in readiness to start. story. We now know that in the remote ages of antiquity, when man was not yet born, grim monsters crushed and killed each other on the icy plains of the primitive world. Death, in other words, is merely a condition of existence, and but for it the earth would long since have become uninhabitable. There were about 1600 men in the funeral cortege, but their slow march through the streets attracted more attention and a greater number of spectators than had any previous parade in San Francisco.

It was a sorrowful yet picturesque scene.
With slow tread two troops of United States cavalry and a light battery of artillery, a commandery of Knights Templer, three commandery of Knights Templar, three regiments of the Second Brigade, N. G. C., and a battalion of another marched with arms reversed and in platoons of twelve files front. From the church, along Post his island home.

"This King made a name for honor. By slow degrees he developed this character, and by a process of evolution will continue to develop it in the world to come. Each of us will be what we are in life, but much more so. Those who strive to improve their opportunities will continue the improvement, while those who neglect them will grow worse. street and down Market to East, space to view the procession was at a premium. Every inch of the sidewalks was occupied, and thousands looked from windows, door steps and housetops. It was with considerable difficulty that the police prevented the spectators from invading the streets in order to obtain a nearer view of the casket containing the monarch's remains.

"This dear King made of himself a certain thing, and it is doubtful if a longer life on earth would have tended to larger spiritual development. Garfield and Lincoln were taken up, as we thought, before their time, but we can now believe that their work was done and other man were needed to east. FORMATION OF PARADE. The formation of the parade had been completed half an hour before the order to start was received. The formation extended along Post street, from Mason to Montgomery. The Second Brigade, N. G. C., done and other men were needed to carry on what they had begun. And so it may be had the advance, and were the first to on what they had begun. And so it may be with this King.

"And now, officers of the fleet, on behalf of the people not only of this church, but of San Francisco and the United States, we bid you take the remains of this man back to his native island. Carry with you the assurance of our sincere sympathy. We thank God that seventy years ago there were raised up missionaries that converted the natives of the Sandwich Islands, and since that time monarch after monarch has been baptized in the Christian faith, including this man. In the providence of God he was taken away, but his body will now be sent back to the island he loved so well, and for which his heart ever yearned." wheel to the right into column and begin the march. In advance was a squad of mounted police. The escort was headed by Brigadier-General John T. Cutting and the officers of his staff, Majors Cluff, Stanley, Burgin, Du Boce and Wilson, and Captain Miles and Boyd. Then came the Signal Corps, under Lieutenant W. E. The funeral cortege arrived at the foot of Market street at half past 3 o'clock. The light-house boat Madrono was lying at Washington-street Wharf ready to receive its royal charge, while about 1000 yards out in the stream rode the Charleston. The crowd that gathered at the wharf was one of the largest that has ever been seen on the water front, exceeding in numbers that which assembled to witness the arriva of General Grant and the coming of Presi dent Hayes. People began to assemble on East street at 11 o'clock, in order to obtain the best positions from which to view the funeral procession. By 1 o'cleck the wharves were packed with a dense crowd, pushing and jostling each other in order to obtain good positions from which to view the mourning cavalcade. The crowd waited for hours for the arrival of the funeral cortege, and passed the time in conversing about the dead King. Captain Dunleavy of the Harbor Police was on duty with fifty-five officers under his command. He was assisted by Sergeants Langford and Helms, and the services of this large posse were fully required to keep the large crowd in order and to maintain a passageway for the procession.

When the cortege arrived at the ferry, Harbor Commissioners English, Alexander and Brown escorted the remains of the King to the Madrono. The light-house tender carried her flag at half-mast, her cabin was hung in black, while her deck was covered with the choicest flowers. Those who hat secured good positions witnessed a magnificent spectacle as the funeral pageant passed slowly along the wharf to the Madrono. When the light-house tender was reached, General Gibbon, representing the United States Army, transferred the royal remains to the custody of Admiral Brown, who, with to the custody of Admiral Brown, who, with his staff, representing the United States Navy, took charge of the dead King. When the remains were conveyed from the hearse to the Madrono, Admiral Brown gave orders to start immediately for the Charleston. Lieutenant Perry, who was in command of the light-house tender, steamed his vessel toward the white cruiser.

TRANSFERRED TO THE CHARLESTON. Besides the leading army and navy officers, the pall-bearers and a number of invited guests accompanied the remains to the Charleston. The Madrono presented a fine appearance as she glided through the waters, with her deck draped in mourning, and flying the American and Hawaiian flags at half-mast. When the tender left her moorings the Charleston began to fire minute guns. During the embarkation minute guns were also fired from Alcatraz and Black Point. The booming of the cannon continued while the royal remains were being transferred from the Madrono to the Charles on. The transference took almost a half hour, the crowds on the piers straining every eye to witness the movements of the officers in charge. Many of the spectated

In the wake of the Caroline were a number of small craft, whose occupants had paid good sums for the accommodations. The Harbor Commissioners followed in the Governor Perkins, which accompanied the cruiser as far as the heads. As soon as the remains were deposited on the deck of the Charleston, Admiral Brown gave orders to start on the melancholy journey to the islands. The white cruiser did not start until 4:35 o'clock, but the people on the wharves remained until she began to move. CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—The fact has just transpired in regard to the theft of a very valuable package of letters belonging to the Northwestern National Bank. Yesterday morning the bank's messenger called at the Postoffice for the bank's mail. He was given part of it, and was told to call for the remainder in fifteen minutes. Just before the expiration of that time a young man, who had evidently overheard the conversation with the messenger, called for the re-maining mail. It was given to him without question and nothing more thought of the matter until the arrival of the regular messenger. By that time the thief had escaped. It is supposed the stolen package consisted of about sixty letters, containing from $100,000 to $150,000, mostly in drafts, checks and other non-negotiable papers. and other non-negotiable papers.

An alarm was given, and the people rushed from their houses. An immense volume of water rushed down the river, and a paper-mill and Dagget's postal-card factory were badly damaged. A railroad trestle was carried away and several factories will have to remain closed. Great excitement prevails, but no further serious damage is reported. The dam, which was 500 feet long and 22 feet deep, cost a million dollars. It is pretty badly damaged.

ELECTION CONTEST.

Nebraska Independents in a Dilemma Through a Supreme Court Decision. LINCOLN (Nebr.), Jan. 22.-The joint convention of the Legislature to hear the election contest met this morning, but at once took a recess until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when the decision of the Supreme Court on the legality of the proceedings was formally delivered. The court holds that the signature of the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor to a concurrent resolu-tion are necessary to make the acts of a joint convention valid.

This leaves the Independents in some-what of a dilemma. They must proceed to pass another concurrent resolution, and this will take about six days. If Governor Boyd refuses to sign it under to-day's decision, no contest can be held. They assert that a resolution calling for a joint session to con-test the right of the Governor to his seat should be legal without his signature, but the State constitution is mandatory on that point. There is some talk of their dropping the contest. If they do, the only obstacle in Boyd's way will be the proceedings to test his citizenship instituted by ex-Governor Thayer.

JUSTICE IN ALASKA.

Criminals Left Unpunished Owing to Lack of Funds to Prosecute.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 .- From the following communications it would seem that jus-tice by jury trial in Alaska is a very expensive luxury. Attorney-General Miller is in receipt of a letter from Marshal Porter at Sitka, saying that the trial of Murderer Clark, who killed Agent George Hemingway of the Alaska Commercial Company, takes place shortly, but subpenas cannot be served for lack of funds for the transportation of witnesses. It becomes necessary, therefore, for the Government to furnish a revenue cutter for the transportation of witnesses. He urges on Congress the importance of immediate action. He says there are many revolting murderers at large, and the citizens are entirely dependent upon Congress for protection to life and property.

Territorial Attorney Johnson inderses these recommendations and says twelve witnesses will be required at the trial of Clark and it will cost about $1000 for each transportation via Say Francisco so it transportation via San Francisco, so it would be economy for the Government to furnish a vessel. Judge Bugbee also inderses Mr. Porter's letter.

He asserted that 7 per cent of American hogs were affected with the disease, as against 0.6 per cent of German hogs.

Schmidt, of the Freisinnige party, urged the necessity of supplying the working people of Germany with American meat, which is considerably cheaper than German meat. Breemel, of the Deutsche Freisinnige party, held that it was unchristian-like to make the people's necessities dear in this barbarous manner. Von Boetticher further said the English and American people did not eat raw meat such as was consumed in Germany. The Reichstag then adjourned.
