The democratic party has again come into her own after sixteen years of waiting and praying. Not only have we succeeded in electing a president for the first time since 1892, but will have a large majority in the house and will likewise control the senate by a small majority. We have everything we could wish for and it now remains for the men honored by the American people to carry out the pledges of the platform conscientiously and honestly with justice to all and special privilege to none. If this is done there is every reason to believe the democratic party will remain in power for many years. If the pledges to the people are broken the party will again be cast out. Our fate is in the hands of the men chosen to serve us, and we believe they will be true to the trust.

The recent ruling of the supreme court of Mississippi that "no judgment shall be reversed on the ground of misdirection to the jury or the improper admission or exclusion of evidence, or for error as to matter of procedure or pleadings unless it shall affirmatively appear, from the whole record that such judgment has resulted in a miscarriage of justice," has been widely commented upon; and nearly every comment has been of a congratulatory nature, the consensus of opinion being that the new rule will tend to simplify court procedure which has been overloaded with technicalities.
