advantage for us to build brick roads while materials, such as briek and cement are cheap. Manufacturers of these materials, like a great many other industrial enterprises are hungry for a market and consequently the bidding will be keen and the prices low, whereas if we defer, or procrastinate speaking more properly, until more prosperous times we will find that the brick-yards and cement manufacturers will have all the orders that they can fill end the prices will be correspondingly higher than now. Now is the time that the public's doilar—has the greatest purchasing power.

See their public improvements in times of properties of the City o lar—your dollar—has the greatest purchasing power.

Second: If governmental bodies and sub-divisions of political corporations, such as counties, would make their public improvements in times of financial depression such work would furnish labor for many who would furnish labor for father and sister, Miss Ellior, there is a visitor to falstka Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Thorburn motored in the day before.

bankable securities; and in all of the definitions of bankable securities municipal bonds or bonds of political sub-divisions, such as counties and special road and bridge districts and school districts are known as Bankable Securities. And it is also a provision of the law of the state of Florida that bonds of the character to be voted on in the coming election cannot be sold for less than their par value and accrued interest at the time of the sale. But such bonds always bring a premium because they are always sale and in a time like this when industrial bonds or bonds of private en-terprises, depending as they do upon market conditions for their value, are far less safe therefore less marketa-ble than municipal bonds. Capital not invested earns no interest. Capi-tal always wants a safe investment and in times of uncertainty is all the more anxious for safe investment be-invested. We might say then that there are a greater purchasing power now than it would have in more prosperous times. Second the work furnished to our labor will relieve the local conditions. Third, there is actually at this time a better market for municipal bonds than in prosperous times when municipal bonds have such strong competitors as the bonds of prosperous industrial enterprises.
