South African Gold.

A South African dispatch says there s an enormous increase in the output of gold at Johannesburg, and that the field there promises to be the richest in the world. The Mashonaland prospectors report that in that remote part of Africa, until recently almost unknown to Europeans, they have found evidence of former occupation by a large mining population, as aches and fevers and cures habitual shown by the remains of extensive alluvial workings and shafts and excavations for small, rich leads, the quartz from which has been ground on large slabs of granite. THE day is not far distant when Arizona will ship her fruit to Californis to compete with the home product of that state. The idea was laughed at a few years ago that oranges raised within a stones throw of the dividing line between Cochise county and Sonora Mexico, would find a market in California, but such is an existing fact Oranges are shipped by the car load from the groves along the river vallevs of Sonora, d'rect to San Francisco where they command a higher price. and are more eagerly sought for than the product of the Golden State.
