A HORSE WHO CAN TALK!
Everybody has heard of a "horse" who can talk, but who has ever seen an equine gift with the power of speech? Such an animal would be pronounced a miracle; but so would the telegraph, which is a hundred years old. Way, even very recently a cure for consumption, which is universally acknowledged to be incurable. Dr. Fayer's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it, if taken in time and given a fair trial. This world-renowned remedy will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy state when other means have failed. Thousands gratefully testify to this. It is the most potent tonic or strength restorer, nutritive, or blood-cleanser and nutritive, or fresh-builder, known to medical science. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh in the Head, and all Lingular Coughs, it is an unequalled remedy. In derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels, as Indigestion, or Dyspepsia, Biliousness, or Liver Complaint, Chronic Diarrhoea, and kindred ailments, it is a sovereign remedy.

GUARANTEED. "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine of its class, and is recommended by the highest medical authorities, and is guaranteed to cure in every case of disease for which it is recommended. Money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

$500 OFFERED by the manufacturer, Dr. Fayer's Catarrh Remedy, for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head.

A LIFE OF SPECULATION.

Nerves Shattered by Gaining $1,000 One Hour and Losing It the Next.

The following question was recently submitted to the Hon. Stephen Van Cullen White, whose reputation as a financier and Wall street millionaire is of national fame.

"What effect in your opinion and from your opportunities of observation has a life of speculation upon the mind, and through it upon the nerves and body of a man? By speculation is here meant especially dealing in stocks or grain on the floor of the exchange, or on the street, or both."

He said: "Your question is extremely generic, and would admit of a volume in reply and then not exhaust the subject. It is a question more suited to a medical practitioner who has had a stock exchange clientele than to one of the victims. But as you honor me by your inquiry with an implied expression of the belief that I may know something to interest your readers, I will speak as from the pew and not the pulpit upon your text. All business in which a man buys more than he needs for his use and for the use of his family is speculation, and there is an element of danger of failure in any business where a man buys more than he has ready cash to pay for. Every merchant engaged in general merchandise business, at wholesale or retail, is a speculator, and one who buys or credits is always in more or less danger of failure in business. Whoever has a business risk has anxiety till the prospective outcome has made itself clear. Then, if prospectively the venture is to become successful, what was anxiety becomes in part exhilaration at success, and if a loss is developed, actual or prospective, the anxiety and care are increased. All mental anxiety tells on the nervous system. If it is great enough to cause sleeplessness it wears fast. But if the sufferer has good digestion, strong and equable circulation and avoids excess of eating and drinking, he can for a long time defy anxiety, whether it is chronic or acute. Now, the only difference between stock speculation on the exchange and a country store upon invoice of general merchandise is that the amount bought or sold in stocks is generally larger in proportion to capital employed, and more important still, the stock exchange prices furnish a constant barometer by which that speculator can constantly measure his losses or his profits, while constant fluctuations all of which he notices, keep him a constant pendulum between a smile and a tear. If a merchant goes into business on $10,000 he can buy from $15,000 to $25,000 worth of goods. If a speculator goes in with $10,000 he can buy $100,000 worth of stocks. The merchant wants two to four months before he can estimate his profit or loss. The stock speculator finds that in an hour he has a profit of $10,000 which he may take; the next hour the profit is all gone, the next he sees a loss of $1,500, and at night he quits the market full of anxiety with probably a loss of $500 to commence the next day's watch of fluctuations. But added to these daily and normal fluctuations there is the effect of a protracted season of prosperity, and the profits of weeks are hopelessly swept away in an hour. Now I think if I were a medical man I should not be afraid to express the belief that quick transition from a Panama suit bath to a Dakota blizzard would have a tendency to produce colds and if the victim had weak lungs it might naturally end in phthisis pulmonalis, unless death occurred from shock and gave a more speedy exit. In the same way, reasoning a priori, I would always guess that a nervous man would come out of a series of panics with shattered nerves. This reasoning is well backed up by the record of men in active speculations whom I have known within the last twenty-five years. Among the so-called successful men probably the wealth which honors covet may have been bought at too dear a cost, even if corrodium care can ever be paid for by money."—Brook UTA 22420.

Leaping Salmon of Canada.
The salmon rivers of Canada are all streams of swift currents, whirling rapids and high falls. The salmon seems to make his way up these streams with as much ease as he moves down. One of the sights in the vicinity of Quebec is the salmon leaping at the Falls of Leveite, and during July many persons assemble there to see it. The falls are a succession of steep tumbles, and the water rushes over the rocks with great velocity. The salmon gather at the foot of the lower tumble, and, with marvelous leaps up the very face of the rushing waters, make their way to the summit without apparent difficulty, gliding up the swift chutes like a flash and mounting each successive tumble until the grand summit is reached. The Canadian will tell you that when there was no legal interference with spearing, the Indians were in the habit of gathering at the foot of the falls in their birch canoes and casting their spears at the salmon as they leaped up the torrents, mowing their coats with such marvellous ease that the salmon aimed at was invariably stopped in his vaulting career and fell back impaled by the Indian's cruel barbed spear. Philadelphia News.

Yes, It's So.
Here is a warning to the beauties. Fanny Davenport says she has never passed a day without pain since she attempted to correct nature. Whenever she hears of any one who is about to try the process, she sends for her and warns her against it. But her warning is seldom heeded. Most actresses would rather suffer and feel shapely than be healthy and fat. Isn't it a good girl—Phobus in New York Press.

"DON'T YOU WORRY."

How Shrewd Business Men Have Solved a Great Problem.

"Is there a fatality among our prominent men?" is a question that we often ask. It is a question that perplexes our leading medical men, and they are at a loss to know how to answer it.

We sometimes think that if the physicians would give part of the energy to the consideration of this question that they give to combating other schools of practice, it might be, satisfactorily answered.

The flights of "isms" reminds us often of the quarrels of old Indian tribes, that were only happy when they were annihilating each other.

Allopathy makes a discovery that promises good to the race. Homopathy betrays it and breaks down its influence. It homopathically makes a discovery that promises to be a boon to the race. Allopathy attacks it.

It is absurd that these schools should fancy that all of good is in their methods and none in any other.

Fortunately for the people, the merit which these "isms" will not recognize, is recognized by the public, and this public recognition, taking the form of a demand upon the medical profession, eventually compels it to recognize it.

Is it possible that the question has been answered by shrewd business men? A prominent man once said to an inquirer, who asked him how he got rich, "I got rich because I did things while other people were thinking about doing them." It seems to us that the public have recognized what this fatality is, and how it can be met, while the medical profession have been wrangling about it.

By a careful examination of his rance reports we find that there has been a sharp reform with reference to examinations, (and that no man can now get any amount of insurance who has the least development of kidney disorder,) because they find that a x-ray out of every hundred in this country do, either directly or indirectly, suffer from kidney disease. Hence, no reliable company will insure a man except after a rigid urinary examination.

This reminds us of a little instance which occurred a short time ago. A fellow editor was an applicant for a respectable amount of insurance. He was rejected on examination, because unknown to himself, his kidneys were diseased. The shrewd agent, however, did not give up the case. He had an eye to business and to his commission, and said: "Don't you worry; you get a half dozen bottles of Warner's safe cure, take it according to directions and in about a month come around, and we will have another examination. I know you will find yourself all right and will get your policy."

The editor expressed surprise at the agent's faith, but the latter replied: "This point is a valuable one. Very many insurance agents all over the country, when they find a customer rejected for this cause, give similar advice, and eventually he gets the insurance."

What are we to infer from such circumstances? Have shrewd insurance men, as well as other shrewd business men, found a secret answer to the inquiry? Is it possible that our columns have been proclaiming, in the form of advertisements, what has proved a blessing in disguise to millions, and yet by many ignored as an advertisement?

In our files we find thousands of strong testimonials, which are all over the two alike, which could not exist except upon a basis of truth; in brief, they are published under a guarantee of $5,000 to any one who will disprove their correctness, and this offer has been standing, we are told, for more than four years.

Undoubtedly this article, which is simply dealing out justice, will be considered as an advertisement and be rejected by many as such.

We have not space nor time to discuss the proposition that a poor thing could not succeed to the extent that this great remedy has succeeded, could not become so popular without merit even if pushed by a Vanderbilt or an Astor.

Hence we take the liberty of telling our friends that it is a duty that they owe to themselves to investigate the matter and reflect carefully, for the statements published are subject to the refutation of the entire world. None have refuted them; on the contrary hundreds of thousands have believed them and proved them true, and in believing have found the highest measure of satisfaction, that which money cannot buy, and money cannot take away.

A Trick of Speech.
Tricks of speech grown into mannerisms often betray people into blunders about enough. One instance of this comes from a town in Maine, where a young man who qualified his reply to every question with the word "handy" twisted into some sort of a conditional clause. It was even some time before he was asked if he would like to be proposed to the lady who became his wife by declaring he would like to marry her "if she could make it handy," but this very likely is a fabrication of invidious gossip.

Calling recently at a home, of which the late master was lying under in the parlor, the visitor was asked if he would like to see the remains of his old friend.

"Well, yes," he answered, "that, I'd like to see them if you've got 'em handy."

"If you haven't, it's no matter."—Boston Courier.
