A vein of chloride and horn silver forty feet thick has been disclosed this week. The influx of prospectors is so large that the hostile Apaches who committed numerous outrages hereabouts last year have fled from their camps and have gone over the border. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad company have-laid out a branch road from here to Lake valley, and the rusif to the new mining district is increasing

THE suit brought against the Grand Central mine is peculiar in its phases, and worthy of particular notice, in the fact that it strikes against the prosperity of Tombstone, in endeavoring to check the operations of a company that is disbursing large sums of money in the direction of the various business interests of this city and county. In effect, therefore, the suit is a matter of public interest and it is within the province of the local press to examine into and comment upon its merits. It seems that one of the original locators of the Grand Central mine, became involved in trouble through the commission of a crime, and while in the hands of the officers of the law, it is alleged, was induced and coerced into deeding his share of the property to an individual who afterwards transferred his interest to the parties now consti-Congress, in any improper effort to says: The time is gone by when tuting the Grand Central company. influence official action in the interest Turkey could be allowed to take the The aforesaid original locator was tuting the Grand Central company. s stenced to the penitentiary for his crime, where he is now serving his term of imprisonment. Now comes his father, claiming that his son being civilly dead, he, as next of kin is his heir at law, and that said son's stated interest in the Grand Central mine forms part of his estate, his transfer thereof being void for fraud. It is difficult to be seen, from the above showing, even allowing the coercion, that the Grand Central Company is in anyway responsible, it being an innocent purchaser in equity and law. A purchaser of mining property is bound only by the record, unless he can be proven a party to fraud. In fact, however, the whole story is extremely "fishy," founded, as it is, upon a basis of crime and blurred by the shadow of the penitentiary. It looks as though the father of the criminal is trading upon the disgrace of the son, in a desperate effort to force a compromise from the owners of one of the richest mines in the United States; and, certainly, he will fail in this instance, for the Grand Central people will resist to the last, secure in the validity of their title and the honesty of their purpose. The suit is brought by able counsel, who have, undoubtedly, been deceived by the criminal and his father. We have listened to the story of the former, and when told to us it had no semblance to the one now told. The entire people of Tombstone are interested in seeing justice done a company which has done so much for their welfare. THE brethren are in no way
