Movies in the news-another pill factory has been established in Chicago.

Pocketbooks for the fall and winter are shorter and considerably lighter than a year ago.

Those statesmen who are already splitting up the German empire are suffering from chin dysentery

Some of our optimistic friends insist that the dawn of prosperity is at hand-but we would rather see the full break of day.

Fort Pierre has been taken by the Germans. That is the name of one of the forts protecting Antwerp, Belgium's temporary capital.

The stock raisers of the Northwest will unload many cattle this fall. But it is well to remember that some of them could have been profitably carried another year.

Only glad babies have been born in the past two years in a certain county township, which is held to augur well for the success of the equal suffrage campaign.

Legislation, pronounced a crime by the unwritten law, needs to be amended somewhat gingerly by the republican press of the state.

Attempts to refute the economic charges. Some of the lawmakers do not seem to be "up" to conditions at the present time.

The close friends of McCarter, Cato Sells and Byrne are complaining of the lack of enthusiasm of the voters, though they are less than a year from the polls. Perhaps if the gentlemen would borrow Winchester and put a few real perforations into the atmosphere, the attention of a portion of the public might be attracted.

Well, it is pleasing anyway to have a democratic candidate for congress admit from the platform that after fifteen years of republican rule this congressional district has more government institutions than almost any other district in the nation. It would seem that the republican congressman has not neglected the district and that the people ought to continue this policy by the election of Judge Rice.

The Courier at Manila no longer carries the name of E. L. Senn as publisher. J. F. Anstett, the editor, is now the owner. An interesting feature of the announcement of the change is the statement that after election the paper must take unto itself a new name. Now published under the heading "Stanley County Courier," it must be newly christened, "as after election the paper, together with Manila and the surrounding territory will be in Haakon county."

The matter of county division should be settled on its merits. It should be kept free from political entanglements of every kind. Yet nothing seems harder to accomplish than this very thing. Every candidate for office, especially if his contest promises to be a close one, seems to feel that he should make something out of the county division movement and that friends of division ought to be for him. On the other hand, a good many people who are favoring county division seem to feel that all the candidates of both parties ought to be out whooping it up for division. This matter of division is a subject on which everyone is entitled to his honest opinion and, moreover, a right to express that opinion. It is true that if a candidate takes a position on the question of division the people have a right to consider that as well as his position on any other public questions in voting for him. But the candidate that turns aside from his individual campaign to devote attention to county division is wasting energy that he should be able to use for something else. The same is true of any committee or person principally interested in the division movement. Both candidates and divisionists should paddle their own canoes. Let the people elect candidates on their merits, and let us also dispose of the division question on its merits.

VAN MOORE MURDER CASE

Famous Murder Case Of 1900 Will Be Finally Ended By Judge Elliott

W. G. Porter returned this morning from Sioux Falls, where he appeared before Judge J. D. Elliott of the district United States court, in the case of Francis Van Moore, an Indian convict from the Cheyenne reservation. Mr. Porter is attorney for Van Moore and appeared before the court with habeas corpus proceedings instituted on behalf of the prisoner. The case is an issue to test the jurisdiction between the state and federal courts in murder cases and when Judge Elliott comes to Aberdeen to open court next month the case will be decided.

A QUESTION ANSWERED

"Why is $100,000 of the Rosebud Indian reservation money deposited in the First National Bank of Clinton, Iowa? What has our congressman from this district been doing while this was going on?"

We suggest the following as an answer to this cute little political question: The funds of the Rosebud reservation are handled by the commissioner of Indian Affairs. The commissioner is one Cato Sells, of Texas. It is reported that the Honorable Cato is a democrat. This report has been denied. The fact that he was appointed by Woodrow Wilson lends some color to the report. Clinton, Iowa, is in the second congressional district of that state. If our recollection serves us right one Irvin S. Pepper is congressman from that district. He is a democrat. Now if anyone imagines that Cato Sells and Irvin Pepper mean to let any Indian money languish and linger in a republican congressman's district, that person is entirely off his nut. In plain words, then, the removal of the Indian funds of this republican congressional district to the banks of a democratic congressional district is just a piece of petty democratic spoilsmanship for which that party has always been notorious. We suggest also that the rule of the department requiring banks to have a capital stock of $100,000 in order to have government funds may throw some light on the matter.

As to what Mr. Martin was doing while this was going on we are unable to say. We suggest, however, that inasmuch as this congressional district has more government institutions than almost any other district in the whole United States, possibly he was helping establish or looking after the national soldiers' home at Hot Springs, the government experiment station at Ardmore, the great irrigation project at Belle Fourche, the fish hatchery at Spearfish, the forest reserve in the Black Hills, or Wind Cave park at Hot Springs, all of which have been established during the term of Mr. Martin's service, to say nothing of the several public buildings, land offices or Indian agencies. Oh, the republicans haven't dealt so badly with this congressional district. If the matter is to rest solely on the record of what has been accomplished, then the voters will want to elect Judge William G. Rice, pleasant and accomplished gentleman though Mr. Gandy may be.

Loss of Control Fatal

Dr. J. Francis Dustin, of Deadwood, Killed as Result of an Accident

At about 6:30 Sunday morning Dr. J. Francis Dustin, of Deadwood, met with a fatal accident at the corner near the home of Mrs. Gustine in the west part of town. He had started in his new car, which he had purchased but a few days before, for Niangua, at which place his daughter is living on a claim, for the purpose of bringing her home for a visit. When coming down the hill he apparently lost control of the machine and when running at a speed of between 35 and 40 miles an hour he came to the sharp corner near the home of Mrs. Gustine. At this point the road turns. Being unable to use the brake, or to steer the machine around the corner at such high speed, the car skidded a trifle and then plunged headlong over the bank, landing 20 feet below on the forward end and turning completely over. The Dr. was thrown clear of the machine which accounts for his not having been killed outright. As it was he suffered very severe bruises about the head, shoulder and chest, and his back was badly bruised and burned with gasoline. Those who saw the accident gave an alarm some, thinking there was a fire, rang the bell. This was fortunate, as it brought out the citizens in short time and all went to the aid of the unfortunate man. All that could be done for his relief was done. He was removed to the home of Hugh Feland and Dr. Richards was summoned and administered first aid. His wife and his partner Dr. Moffat, were notified and came down in a car and took the injured man to the hospital at Deadwood, where he died at 10:30 that evening.

Deceased was well known in the eastern part of the state, having formerly practiced medicine at Alexandria, Fairview and several other points. He was 64 years old and is survived by a wife, daughter and two brothers-William and Frederick.
