FIRST AMERICAN GLASS.

Made at a Factory Built by a Boston Man in New Hampshire Town.

The first American glass factory was erected in the town of Temple, N. H. Washington, in his diary, speaks of glass being made in New Haven, Conn., in the year 1789.

One would suppose by the language he uses that he considers it a new and quite extraordinary affair. It was nine years previous to this, and during the very war whose issue first enabled the country to commence its own manufacturing that Robert Hewes of Boston began to carry out the project which he had long conceived, but had hitherto found impracticable, if not impossible, under Eng lish rule—that of making glass in America for America.

In 1780 Mr. Hewes selected a site for his factory secure from the British forces (his glassblowers were Hessians and Waldeckers-soldiers who had deserted from the British army), and he must have had an eye for the beautiful in nature. He chose a spot on the north slope of Kidder Mountain, near its base. To the northwest Mount Monadnock rears his granite crown, standing like a giant sentinel; to the north, and running east, are the Temple mountains, bold and precipious; to the east a beautiful valley holds in its embrace the towns of Wilton, Milford and Nashua, while to the northeast Joe English Hill and the Uncanernucks mountains conceal the city of Manchester.

The place is now reached by a twomile walk over an old road, long a stranger to travel other than by grazng cows and nature loving tourists The stone work about the ovens and the foundations of the building are all that now remain to remind us that here was another example of the American people's struggle for independence.

Few Desertions From the Mexican

"Instances of desertion from the army in Mexico are very tre and for the best of reasons," said anor Jose de Minaldez of Nueva Leon "The reason lies in the almost sure of the fugitive and the certain, that he will get not one but numerous floggings on his bare back. These lashings are done in the presence of the comrades of the deserter, and when the men see how great is the suffering of the miserable wretch who tried in vain to quit his military obligations they are forced to conclude that it is better to stick to the army than undergo such a terrible ordeal."

England Through Other Eyes.

We cannot complain if many French critics find our climate depressing, nor if they do not appreciate our notions of Sabbath-keeping, or invariably admire the British public's method of holiday making.
