

THE WINSLOW MAIL.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Editor.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice of Winslow, Arizona, under Act of Congress of March 1, 1879.

Published every Friday. Subscription, $2.00 per year.

Friday, - - - June 30, 1916.

A reported race riot at Needles finally developed that the city marshal had to draw a gun on a drunken Mexican he was placing under arrest.

If any of our Winslow millionaires having private fish ponds are desirous of stocking up on a new crop of the finny tribe, they can do so by writing Congressman Hayden. The Bureau of Fisheries are honoring requests from congressmen at this time. Peddling fish and distributing garden seed as vote getters has about run its course, and it is about time it was eliminated from the governmental expense account.

In this issue of the Mail will be found the political announcement of Hon. Geo. A. Olney, democratic candidate for governor before the primaries. We have no personal acquaintance with Mr. Olney, but a careful reading of all the democratic papers in the state discloses no criticism of the man, nor of his ability. In view of the bitter fight going on in the democratic ranks over the gubernatorial nomination, and the further fact that Mr. Olney has been in public life for some years it would seem if no criticism can be made of either his public or private life he is at least deserving of the honest consideration of democrats when they go to the primaries.

The republican state convention meets in Prescott next Thursday for the purpose of reviewing the field of prospective candidates for the several state offices, with the hopes and confidence of placing before the republican voters of the state a clean progressive body of men for their suffrage at the September primaries. But something more than good men are needed to arouse the interest of the people. The convention must pass some strong ringing resolutions as to the principles the party will espouse in the administration of the state affairs, and when the vote in November discloses that the party has been successful, it should be the duty of the state committee to see that the principles set forth in convention are carried out to the last jot and tittle. Keep faith with the people. It is the only hope of party supremacy.

An initiative petition having for its purpose the creation of the office of state labor commissioner is being circulated, and generally signed, assuring it a place on the ballot at the November election. We have read the provisions of the proposed law, and while it does not embrace all the features that to our mind are really essential to make the law effective, still it is a move in the right direction to have a tribunal to handle the labor problems that are continually arising in this state, where our principle industry is mining. The principle objection to the bill is that it provides for an additional salaried officer, with deputies and traveling expenses, which will be an added burden to the tax-payers, while the duties of the office a major portion of the time are only nominal. The bill would have been more acceptable to the people had it provided for the creation of a board of arbitration to handle all labor troubles, allowing only a per diem while the board were actually engaged in the work of their office. The people would get better results from such a board, and at a considerable saving in expense.

Democracy Not for Progressives

The editor of the Arizona Gazette, in all seriousness, is urging members of the progressive party, now they are without a candidate for president, to join with the democrats to elect Mr. Wilson. Here is his lament: "The time now comes when it is distinctly up to the members of the Progressive party that was, to demonstrate whether they were really and truly in favor of reform or whether they were merely seeking the spoils of office. If they were honest in their reform ideas there is but one ticket to which they can conscientiously give their adherence—that headed by the great reformer Woodrow Wilson."

We take it the editor of the Gazette is a man of more than ordinary intelligence, but a perusal of the above paragraph at least casts a cloud on his mental capacity and reasoning faculties. Wherein, pray tell, is there a single plank of the democratic platform that is in harmony with the platform adopted by the progressive party in 1912? The three principle tenets of the progressive party was a new nationalism, a protective tariff and a merchant marine; and the democratic doctrine is now and always has been for state's rights, free trade and hobbling American shipping. The progressive party was made up largely of republicans, who thoroughly believed in the principles of that party, but rebelled at the high handed methods of the party bosses. A few democrats joined the progressive movement because they were disgusted with the action of the Baltimore convention when Champ Clark was buncoed out of the presidential nomination by William Jennings Bryan and his following, but they were never in harmony with the principles of the progressives, and they will probably return to their former affiliations. Progressive republicans everywhere, like Mr. Roosevelt, will be found voting for Mr. Hughes because he represents their ideas of government, and is free from the boss control that brought on the separation four years ago.

At that time we were opposed to the election of Mr. Roosevelt for president, but in looking back over the years of Mr. Wilson's administration now happily drawing to a close, and viewing the humiliating position in which the United States finds itself to-day by his watchful waiting policy that has brought us in contempt and ridicule, we cannot but regret that more republicans did not join the progressive movement and make Mr. Roosevelt's election possible. Thousands of republicans in close states who voted for Mr. Wilson to insure the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt are of this same mind, and in view of this fact why should any one expect progressive republicans to vote for the continuation of the Wilson policies. Virile patriotic Americanism is the shibboleth of both progressives and republicans in this campaign, and the leader of this sentiment is Charles Evans Hughes.

The progressive national committee, in session at Chicago last Monday, by a vote of 32 to 6 endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Hughes, the republican nominee for president. A typical Roosevelt letter, shooting straight from the shoulder, was read to the committee, in which he declined the progressive nomination, and urged his followers to get behind the republican ticket for victory and the restoration of Americanism. Among other statements in his letter Mr. Roosevelt says:

"I regard Mr. Hughes as a man whose public record is a guarantee that he will not merely stand for a programme of clean-cut, straight-out Americanism before election, but will resolutely and in good faith put it through if elected." He is beyond all comparison better fitted to be president than Mr. Wilson.

It will be a grave detriment to the country to reelect Mr. Wilson. I shall, therefore, strongly support Mr. Hughes. Such being the case it is unnecessary to say that I cannot accept the nomination on a third ticket. I do not believe that there should be a third ticket."

"Mr. Hughes has shown in his career the instinct of efficiency which will guarantee that, under him, the government will once more work with vigor and force. He possesses that habit of straightforward thinking which means that his words will be correlated with his deeds and translated into facts. His past career is the warrant for our belief that he will be the unflinching opponent of that system of invisible government which finds expression in the domination of the party boss and the party machine. His past career is a guarantee that whatever he says before election will be made good by his acts after election. Morally, his public record shows him to be a man of unbending integrity; intellectually it shows him to be a man of original and trained ability."
