Passes to Reward

Tresa McCloud, a student in the Phoenix Union High School, passed away this week at a local hospital following an operation. Rev. F. W. Haynes is here from Pasadena to conduct the funeral this afternoon.

The fellow who gets absolutely wedded to one way of doing, is unwilling to adapt himself to new improvements or environment, is riding for a fall. Some day he is going to find himself in the predicament that the old maid did. For thirty years she had looked under her bed every night. When she took her first ride in a Pullman sleeping car and was assigned an upper berth she looked under her bed before retiring and—there he was.

Smith asked Brown to have a drink with him and the latter refused.

But why not? said Smith.

Well, replied Brown, there are really three reasons.

First, I promised my wife on her death bed that I would stop drinking.

Second, it's too early in the morning.

And, third, I've just had a drink.

What has become of the Prisoner's song?—MRS. B.

My Dear Madam: It was lost on the Sidewalks of New York.

A lady went to a drug store and asked for a bottle of medicine that the druggist could recommend as "good for man or beast." She said her husband was sick and she wanted to be sure of getting the right medicine.

Dr. Swan, to patient—"You certainly have acute appendicitis."

Sweet Young Thing—"You flatter me."

What makes you look so disconsolate?

Pete wants me to be pall bearer at his wife's funeral again.

Well, it's not your funeral.

Thats just the trouble. I was pall bearer for his first wife, and for his second wife. And then he married that Perkins girl and she died, and now his fourth wife is dead, and he is giving me a chance to be one of her pall bearers. And you know I hate to be accepting favors all the time and never doing any.
