Tin Cans Made Into Candlesticks

(By International News Service.)
SALONICA, Sept. 15.—Nothing is too inconsiderable for the Turkish artisans of Salonica to utilize in some ingenious fashion. Thus the despised American tomato can, the humble tin jam container, are prizes sought far and wide by the Moslem tinsmiths who fashion this despised flotsam-and-jetsam of the trash pile into candlesticks which sell for a respectable price in the city's street bazaars.

The tin-can candlestick, an article apparently peculiar to Salonica, is a commodity of comparatively recent conception. Its appearance dates from the coming of the American Red Cross to the Greek port. In recent months hundreds of canned rations have been distributed by the American relief workers here to Russian refugees passing through on their way to political sanctuary in Serbia. And so it happened that tin cans have found their way in great numbers to the city of trash heaps.

Every day the Turkish tinsmiths comb over the refuse, extract the precious metal containers and bear them away in triumph to their workshops. Later the transformed cans make their way to the bazaars in the shape of crude candlesticks, which find a ready sale among marketing peasants who carry them off to light their humble boards in hundreds of mountain huts.

Pork sausage, pure, and made before your very eyes, and seasoned to suit your taste, can be secured now every day at Vick Anderson & Co.'s meat market.

Miss Mabel Moore informs us that she desires to send a fruit display to the Knoxville Fair this year. Anyone having a variety of five different kinds of fruits will please send to Miss Moore's office not later than September 23rd, or see her in person at an early date that she may arrange for the Greene County display this year. This county has taken the premium for the past two years on fruits and with the splendid crop this year, there is no reason why we should not carry off the blue ribbon again this year. Those interested in the exhibit at Knoxville should consult with Miss Moore and render her all the assistance possible in her efforts to hold Greene County in the lead.

Woman Saves Sister from Death by Gas Statue of Evangeline Near Well Grand Pre

(By International News Service.)

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—Boston members of the Psychical Research Society and scores of others interested in the occult expressed the hope that a scientific investigation might be made of the "premonition" which led Mrs. Annie McGonigle all the way from her home in the South End to the room of Mary Talbot, eighteen, her sister, in East Boston. She arrived in time to save the girl from death by gas.

Mrs. McGonigle is sure the message came from her sister's guardian angel.

"All through the afternoon," she said, "the thought was in her mind that all was not well with Mary. When darkness came and I received no word from her the thought was overpowering. I hurried to East Boston and, finding her house in darkness, looked about for a policeman."

"Then came doubts to harass me. 'You fool,' something said, 'the policeman will only laugh at you. There is nobody at home. Mary will be angry.'"

"Nevertheless, I told the officer my story and he decided to force the front door."

"My sister was lying on her bed unconscious. Gas was filling the room from a defect in the piping. The officer called an ambulance and Mary was hurried to the East Boston Relief Hospital."

After physicians had worked over her for half an hour Miss Talbot was able to go home with her sister.

Natives Dive for Liquor in Hawaii

(By International News Service.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—Hawaiian waters now have a new thrill for swimmers, a thrill that exceeds even that of the far-famed surf-riding. It is a thrill that rarely happens these days.

Several weeks ago a steamer loaded with sugar, went on the rocks, was floated and brought to Pearl Harbor for repairs.

In cleaning the ship of its cargo the officials found whiskey and gin in cases in large numbers, some say to the extent of five tons in weight, scattered among the sugar sacks. The entire cargo of sugar and its traveling combination, which was making the journey incognito, was bound for the Atlantic coast.

But a drydock is no place for wet goods. Overboard went the cases.

The scramble then began, with a fleet of small boats cruising the vicinity and swimmers from the shore making records for submerged swimming, all feverishly searching for the whiskey and the gin. It is reported that several hundred cases of the valuable liquids were rescued from the briny deep and placed at the disposal of prohibition subjects.

So many thousands of women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that there is hardly a neighborhood in any city, town or hamlet in this country wherein some woman has not found health in this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy. If you are suffering from some womanly ill, why don't you try it?

When Vick Anderson & Co. tell you they are selling you pure pork sausage, you can depend upon what you are getting. They now have it on hand every day in the week.

GRAND PRE, N. S., Sept. 15.—Where once the pines and hemlocks of the murmuring forest primeval stood like druids of old with voices sad and prophetic, near the little village of Grand Pre, on the shores of the Basin of Minas, scene of Evangeline's story told by the poet Longfellow, a life-sized statue was unveiled of the fair Acadian maiden.

The site, so tradition says, was the farm of Evangeline's father, Benedict Bellefontaine, wealthiest farmer of Grand Pre. The statue is bronze and it stands by the well that is known in the region as Evangeline's well and still from its dripping moss-covered bucket villagers quench their thirst with water drawn from its cool depths. Now the maiden of romance will keep guard o'er the old well forever in the little park set aside by the Canadian National Railways.

The wife of the famous Lord Burnham, a newspaper owner of England, gently threw off the veil of the statue at its dedication, while Sir Gilbert Parker spoke of the friendship that binds together the people of France and England. In the large gathering present were men of the imperial press from five continents visiting Canada.

Though waste are those pleasant farms and the farmers forever departed, scattered like dust and leaves when the mighty blasts of October seize them and whirl them aloft and sprinkle them far o'er the ocean, Evangeline's well is today much the same as Longfellow described it: "Firmly builded with rafters of oak, the house of the farmer stood on the side of the hill commanding the sea and a shady sycamore grew by the door with a woodbine wreathing around it. Farther down on the slope of the hill was the well with its moss-grown bucket fastened with iron and near it a trough for the horses."

Large Quantity of Wheat for Argentina

(By International News Service.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Two cargoes of wheat were reported sold at New York recently for movement to Argentina. At the same time Brazil bought 225,000 bushels at New York, according to the Chicago Board of Trade.

It was pointed out that it is not unusual for wheat to be sent from the United States to Brazil, but that a sale to Argentina was a new factor and indicative of the general situation of that country. Argentina shipments, which have been running up into millions, dropped to approximately 500,000 bushels for the second week in August.

In the Chicago market, where trading in wheat for future delivery was resumed in July and the law of supply and demand returned as the dominating influence, crop reports from Australia have been watched with interest. The Australian wheat crop has been estimated at 120,000,000 bushels, indicating an exportable surplus of 80,000,000 bushels. The new crop will be harvested early in the new year. This estimate compares favorably with previous years, but grain men think it rather early to predict a record yield for Australia. It is stated by buyers and sellers in the world open market here that if the Australian crops turn out as well as anticipated much credit will be due to the fine quality of seed available this year.
