speak Gently to a Little Child.

Break gently to the little child,
So guitaless and so free,
Who, with a trustfel, loving heart,
Puts contilence in thee,
Speak not the cold and careless thoughts
Which time has taught thee well,
Nor breathe one word whose hitter tone
Distrust snight seem to tell.

If on that brow there rests a cloud,
However light is be,
Speak loying words, and let him feel
He has a friend in thee;
And do not send him from thy side
Till on his face shall rest
The joyous look and beaming sintle
That mark a happy breast

Oh! teach him—this should be our sim— To cheer the aching heart.
To strive, where shockest darkness religos,
Some reulantee to impart;
To spread a peaceful, quiet calm,
Where dwells the noise of strife—
Thus doing good, and blessing all,
To spend the whole of life.

To love, with pure affection deep, All creatures, great and small, And still a stronger love to bear For Illm who made tham all-Remember, its no common task. That thut to the is given. To rair a spirit fit to be.

The habitant of Heaven.

The Coquette. Trust her not, trust her not, she will deceive you,
Tangle your heart in her magical net;
Bind you in fetters, and creally leave you
To ecape as you can.—Oh, heware the Coquette

Look at her dark brilliant eyel how it flashes Whenever y are to presume she'll forget; Look how bewitchingly droops she the lashes When you are watching her.—Fly the Coque

Mark how her voice in its rich music trembles, When speaking of passion of love or regret. You deem that your own, her own spirit resemb Trust not such seeming.—She's but a Coque

Hope from his prey the ganat walf to inveigie, Hope that a savage when wronged may forget, Look for the licert of a dove in an eagle, But look not for truth from a heartless Coquette!
