Neither the brazen nor the cunning kind, but clothes that by their very character present cogent arguments in their own favor--arguments that will convince you in spite of yourself. Scan them with "all the industrious malice of a foe," yet with each look another element of superiority is revealed. These are Persuasive Clothes--Kuppenheimer Clothes--the kind that compel the will to the purchasing point by sheer force of unalloyed worth. They are so permeated with the germ of excellence that none short of a finished custom tailor can equal them, and even he doesn't pretend to do it at our prices. No matter where you live, your foremost clothier will, to-day, display Kuppenheimer's Fall and Winter models, and though he is usually slow to voice his preference for any particular line, he will promptly endorse the Kuppenheimer claim of superiority.
