Changed Their Minds.

"I see some of the traveling men have been telling you about our being snow bound up at the Valley," said a gentleman to a BEE man yesterday. "He didn't tell you about the three fellows who were in such terrible hurry to get down to the Bluffs that they almost made a start to drive, did her One of the three was from Chicago, another from Michigan, while the third was from St. Louis. They all went out and bought new woolen caps and scarfs, and an oil stove to keep their feet warm, and engaged a sleigh with a driver to bring them down. It took them a day and a half to get ready, but one by one they backed out. They remained at the Valley and came down with us Saturday."
"What will become of the stove and things they bought for the journey?" suggested the BEE man.

"Oh, expenses will be charged with them," he replied with a wink of his eye.

Mormons at Work.

As a BEE man was talking to one of the firm in a Broadway boot and shoe store yesterday he learned that the two men who were just about to leave the store were Mormon elders so the BEE man hooked onto them, note book in in hand, and learned their names as J. E. Peterson and E. A. Bagley.

Walking on Railway Tracks. Several fatal accidents have occurred in this vicinity to persons walking on railway tracks. The railway commissioners of the state have been examining a case similar to the one which occurred on Christmas day at Greendale. The board, after exonerating the railway employes, makes the following recommen-

The commissioners would take this oceasion to emphasize the recommendation made in their annual report, viz: The enactment of a law making it a penal offense for any one, not connected with or in the employ of railway companies, to trespass on the track. We have been at some pains to get the testimony of experienced engineers on this matter, and the universal testimony is that it is one of continuous annoyance to trainmen and of imminent danger to those walking on the track. Engineers cannot be expected to slow up their trains for every man they see ahead of them on the track. If they did the publie would complain because time and connections were not made. It is taken for granted by engineers that such persons will step aside in time to avoid being hit. Many seem, for the sake of annoying an engineer, to pretend not to hear the coming train, and only just at the last moment step off after the engi-neer has been put to the trouble and anxiety for their safety, and often, as the train would pass by them, they, with some motion of the head and hand, would give the engineer to understand that they purposely annoyed him. As a material result it is taken for granted that all such trespassers will take care of themselves by avoiding in time the coming train.

H. N. McGrew, the Denison insurance rustler, enjoys getting a joke on others so well that revenge is sweet. Those who have seffered from his ingenious and witty sallies will appreciate a set-back which he received the other day. On entering a railway car, as is his wont, he glanced about to see if there were any particularly handsome young ladies on board, any spying one, of wonderfully pretty face and winsome form, he sat down on the opposite side of the aisle and began to "impress" her. "Mae" is not bad looking by any means, and arrayed in his best clothes, he shines. He threw a winsome smile or two over to the young lady, and at last attracted her the young lady, and at last attracted her read, "Does this train go to Vermillion " pulled down his vest, put and a twirl on his monstache, and boldly rose to accept this modest open-ing of what he hoped would be a happy acquaintance. Stepping across to her seat, and bowing gracefully, he started in with his best soprano tones: No. madam, this train does not go to Vermillion. You will have to get off at He stopped, for the pretty face looked at him bewildered, and the dainty hand reached toward him a tablet and pencil on which he was to reply. It dawned through "Mac's" brain that the little lady was deaf and demb. He retired hastily from the scene, but was followed by two or three travelling men who had en watching proceedings, and who enjoyed themselves at his expense on reach ing the smoking car.

The Paper Collar Trade.

"You keep shirt collars?" asked a man with long grizzly black hair and a full beard, of a clerk in a store on Broadway near Main street yesterday, just as a BEE man had saluted the clerk with a "Good morning, Sam.'

"Yes; what kind, paper?" responded the clerk.

"Yes." "What size?"

"Fourteen and a half."

"The customer was served in about two minutes and had left the store, when the BEE man said: "Sam, how'd you know he wanted paper collars?"

Election Draws Nigh.

As election day, which is on March 1, draws nigh, candidates for nomination to the various' positions become more numerous. The election will be for municipal officers and there will be elected a mayor, three aldermen-one from the first ward, one from the second ward and one at large, judge of superior court, city treasurer, city auditor, city attorney, city marshal and city weighmaster.

For the mayoralty the present mayor told a Bee man yesterday that he was not a candidate and would not run. The candidates for auditor are F. A. Burke, the present incumbent; T. A. Kirkland, ex-county treasurer; and Mr. Brown, ex-county treasurer. For city marshal the present incumbent,

F. H. Guanella, is a candidate for re-nomination, while Tom Skinner, chief of police; Vie Keller and ex-Sheriff Theo. Guittar are, it is said, peeping through the bars of the city jail at the marshal's

Was It Butterine? "Say, do you know what butterine is when you see it?" asked a man of family vesterday of a friend who was going up Broadway in company with a Bee repre

"Well, it's hard to answer. I've used it, and the fact is I now have some at home that I bought on Saturday night. I was told to bring some butter home, and I hunted in five or six stores for 'good butter,' but they all said they had none that was very good, so I finally got in one store where, when I asked for two pounds of good butter, the boss said, 'I've ome nice creamery but no country.' So said, 'Butterine, ch?' and he said, 'yes, it's colored nice and most people don't know the difference.' So I thought I'd take it home, as my wife would not know the difference.'"

How much a pound did you pay for it? Was it like this?' untying the string around the package be held in his hand.

"Yes, exactly. It cost me 15 cents a pound. I bought it at ______ grocery."

"Well, the snoozer. I bought this there, too, and he said it was 'creamery,' and I haid 25 cents." and I paid 25 cents,"
"Next time you buy any say you want butterine, and I guess he'll only charge you 15 cents."

Avoca Affairs. Avoca, Iowa, Jan. 10.-The all important question "Who is to be our postmaster?" is answered at last, and very satisfactorily, in the appointment of A. P. Cramer, editor of the Avoca Herald. We know of no one better suited for the position, and congratulations are now in

It is indeed an ill wind that blows nobody any good. Having reference to our three days of snow and blow, which while it lasted was terrible, but consoled us by leaving snow enough for sleighing, in consequence of which Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. N. Hodgson, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Xanten, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Harlow, Mr. E. D. Hoopes, Mrs. C. H. Norton, Mrs. H. Hancock, Mrs. M. Gardner, Miss Lotta Hancock, Miss Clara Norton and Mr. W. H. Negley comprised a sleighing party who on Wednesday evening visited W. H. Hardman and his estimable lady of Hancock, who were wholly unconscious of their impending fate. The jingle of the bells and the familiar "Sweet Bye and Bye" was heard as the merry party entered the little city it lasted was terrible, but consoled us by the young lady, and at last attracted her attention. The smile was coyishly returned, as he thought, and he made a more open one. The flirtation began, to his mind, to become quite promising. The little lady slyly wrote on a little slip of paper a delicate note, and "Mac," watching operations, had hard work to keep his heart from crowding his palate out of shape. Soon a pretty little hand, clad in a dainty glove, passed the note to him. He took it eagerly, opened it and quarters, all being thrown out at the church door. After standing Mrs. Gord-ner again on her feet and assuring her she still lived, and that Alice Harlow (182 pounds) did not fell on her, and picking Mrs. Xanten up, who lay prone upon the ground wating for no one knows what, unless for all flying objects to pass, Mr. Negely next came under observation. Now, while Mr. N. is known to successfully evade close corners, the force of argument was brought to bear so forcibly upon him that he was forced to succumb, and only arose upon Mrs. Hodgson, Lotta Han-cock and Clara Norton giving their consent. The driver narrowly escaped a sudden end by successfully dodging Si in eard-playing and a general good time. At 12 o'clock the four horse sleigh was ready and all took a ride, arriving home safely, W. R. Campbell of Council Bluffs was an Avoca visitor Wednesday. ed to Mr. Hardman's residence, and was heartily welcomed. The evening passed west of Chicago. This being the week of prayer the mar-ried ladies' progressive euchre club do not entertain.

Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Hoopes entertained twenty of their friends in honor of Miss Lotta Hangock of Davenport, Iowa, who is visiting Avo-ca friends. Mr. C. N. Voss and Mrs. A. W. Askwith secured first prize, while W. Askwith secured first prize, while Mr. O. B. Nelson and Mrs. Dr. Xanten were happy "boobies."

January of the new year brings many changes. W. A. Travis accepts the deputy county clerkship, M. Cramer resigning. J. H. Lang, our deputy sheriff, steps down and out. He has given good satisfaction, and many regret his going. The drug firm of Wiese & True ceased to exist; Conner & Dunham hold forth in their stead.

The Avoca colored jubilee songsters gave an entertainment in Carson, Wednesday eve. Since their appearance at home, December 4 and 5, their donations to the Home for the Friendless have been forgotten. As we understand-owing, of course, to poor business.

Avoca moves on notwithstanding the distinguished personage known as "Lone Wolf," is no more. However, his mem-ory will ever be cherished by one or two of his (Avoca) lady (?) friends. So says dame rumor.
