Edgar Howard on Hitchcock.

Editor Howard in Populorum Progress, February 24, 1907.

In this article, the author comments on the Populorum Progress movement and its efforts to organize farmers and promote democratic principles within the agricultural sector. He discusses the role of William Jennings Bryan and the Populist Party in advocating for the rights of farmers and the need for a more equitable distribution of wealth.

He also highlights the importance of labor unions and the need for workers to stand together against corporate power. Howard emphasizes the need for a strong, democratic government that represents the interests of ordinary citizens.

Overall, the article calls for a renewed commitment to the ideals of democracy and social justice, urging readers to support movements that aim to create a fairer society for all people.
