Sioux Falls, Press, 27: In the First regiment are men of every trade under the sun, almost. There are carpenters, blacksmiths, bakers, cooks, watchmakers, saddlemakers, painters, printers and in fact about all the trades. The professions are also largely represented. If the boys get tired of sitting around Manila they can publish a newspaper, open a law office or found a musical conservatory. An example of what the boys in Camp Dewey can do occurred yesterday. The clock in the adjutant's tent has been knocked down several times and as a result went on a strike. Frank Halstead, leader of the regimental band came along and noticing that the clock had stopped took it to his tent, dissected it and in a short time returned it in good working order.

CAMP THOMAS.

Ben Benson Writes Entertainingly of the Trip of the Twelfth Minnesota from St. Paul to Chickamauga Park, Georgia.

Peter Gill of D. McKinnon's store is in receipt of a letter from Ben Benson, formerly a clerk in N. D. McGilivray's store. When war was declared Mr. Benson returned to his home in Minnesota where he was a member of a militia company and went into active service with the Twelfth infantry regiment of that state. He now writes from Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga., under date of May 21, and Mr. Gill kindly permits us to make the following extracts from the letter:

"As you will see by the date of this letter we are 'way down in Georgia.' We left St. Paul last Monday at 11:30 a. m., and arrived here at 5 p. m., Thursday. We had a fine trip as we were provided with Pullman sleepers through without change. Our regiment required thirty cars, including horse and supply cars. We left St. Paul over the Minneapolis and St. Louis, passing through Iowa via Cedar Rapids and Burlington, down into Missouri, arriving at St. Louis Tuesday. Thence over the Mobile and Ohio railway crossing the Mississippi river into Illinois at Cairo, where our cars were ferried across the Ohio river into Kentucky passing down through the western part of the state into Tennessee, crossing the entire state to Corinth, Miss., thence through Alabama back to Chattanooga, Tenn. Our train traveled in three sections and at nearly every town we received a friendly ovation, except in one or two instances when our platform guards were stoned by small mobs. At Chattanooga we could sit in the cars and see Lookout Mountain looming up, from the top of which you can see several states. On the other side is Missionary Ridge, where the great charge was made up in the mountain in the war of the rebellion. Our train proceeded four miles out of Chattanooga, into Georgia, where we left our cars, also everything that resembled a soft snap. The officers didn't do a thing but make us march twelve miles under a burning hot sun, out to Chickamauga Park. It was a hard march for the boys, and it told on a great many as we had been on short rations during the trip south, having received as a ration only a piece of dry bread, one spoonful of canned beans and a small piece of canned meat, which the boys call horse meat, or red horse; and I guess it is, as I found something that looked like a piece of harness in mine. These were the rations that were issued to each man three times a day. We generally had to wait an hour or two for our coffee after placing our sumptuous repast under our belts. The first night at the Park we slept on the ground in the open air, with a blanket and Georgia atmosphere to keep the dew off. We went to bed hungry, as our supply car had got lost in the shuffle. The next day our commissary sergeant hustled us a few beans and a small quantity of hardtack. The regiment is now drilling hard and the boys are beginning to understand what army discipline really is. The days are very warm and quite a number of our company are on the hospital report.

"Three Spanish spies have been captured here, charged with poisoning wells, one of whom has been shot and the other two will go off in the fireworks to-night. Our boys dug a well yesterday and we have a strong guard over it night and day.

"I have to get up at 5 o'clock every morning, which comes pretty hard, as I have a good appetite for sleep.

"These old camping grounds remind one of the hot times during the 60's, and on the spot we are camped one of the hottest battles of the war was fought. "Kind regards to all my friends."
