DeSmet, May 6.—A case of the hunted turnip on the hunter through tragic results is reported here from Danbury, Ia., by Richard Broders, who has returned from that place, where he was called by the death of his brother, who was killed in a most peculiar manner.

The brother and another young man were shooting coppers with a 22-calibre rifle when they discovered a mink. Determining to capture the mink alive, the younger Broders put the stock of his rifle on the animal. In some manner the mink is believed to have reached far enough up with its fore paws to grasp the trigger and explode the rifle, the charge entering the lad's side and penetrating sufficiently far to cause leakage of the heart, from which death resulted the following day.

Indian Girls Burned School

Sioux Falls, May 6.—That two Indian girls, one 12 and the other 15 years old, were responsible for the burning of the Episcopalian school at Mission was the word received in Sioux Falls last evening. It is said that the two girls, both from the Rosebud reservation, have made a full confession of the act, and that the incendiary was prompted by a desire to get out of school and return to their homes. A young Indian boy is also thought to be involved in the crime.

Warrants will be issued against the girls and the boy by the United States attorney, it is understood, and the trio taken to Deadwood for a preliminary examination.

The Service Rendered by Specialized Knowledge

CRUDE petroleum, the raw material employed by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), is so varied in character, that to manufacture products of standard quality, requires a profound knowledge of petroleum chemistry and the utmost skill in refining. Long experience has proved that the greater the scientific knowledge employed the more perfect will be the products manufactured.

The responsibility for the manufacturing of Standard Oil products is placed upon the shoulders of men trained to recognize the delicate variance of each complicated operation. This work also is checked carefully by highly trained scientists employed in the laboratories.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) bases its standards of manufacture upon the service which its products shall render the consumer. The maintenance of such standards is dependent upon the technical knowledge of the experts who formulate them.

There is no factor in the activities of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) which yields greater benefit to the consumer, and which is followed more insistently, than that the men who have charge of each process must have highly specialized knowledge of every step in the process under their jurisdiction.

This fact is so well established that each division of the manufacturing department has come to be a separate enterprise, and because of this extreme specialization every product coming from the refinery is in effect a primary product.

For instance, the department which is responsible for manufacturing Polarine and other greases is in charge of men who have made a profound study of lubricants of this class: men who know intimately every step and every reaction which is necessary if these lubricants are to meet the high standards of quality which the laboratories have set.

And so it is in every department of the organization. The men in charge of the several departments are recognized by the industry generally as masters of the intricate problems of manufacturing and marketing.

It is this fact which has made this Company a leader in its field.
