MERRY MAKERS EAT, DRINK AND DANCE FOR JOY

Masquerade balls at the White Pelican and Houston's Opera House attract the greatest crowds. Arrival of 1913 is greeted with all sorts of noise making contrivances obtainable.

The New Year was ushered in last night amid scenes of merrymaking, in which noise producing implements were in great demand.

Masquerades were much in order, affairs of this character being given at Houston's opera house and at the White Pelican hotel. Each of these had its full share of maskers, and joy reigned supreme.

At the White Pelican the maskers ceased their dancing shortly before 12, and from that time till 1913 was several hours old banqueting, drinking and merrymaking were entered into with a right good will. There were a number of elaborate and unique characters represented, and the myriad of colors and costumes in the elaborately decorated lobby and dining room of the hostelry was kaleidoscopic in its effect.

The seventeenth annual New Year mask ball given by John V. Houston was the attraction at the opera house. As is usual, the floor was filled with

The parade and other events of the kind that have featured in former inaugurations were eliminated today. Governor Sulzer insisted that there be no form of display in connection with the inauguration. The only concession he made was to make an address from the Capitol steps to the thousands of cheering people who were unable to gain admission to the building.

The oath of office was administered in the assembly chamber. Rt. Rev. Burke, Bishop of the Albany Diocese, pronounced the invocation.

Crowds from all parts of the state were present, including big delegations from New York and Brooklyn.

NO POST MORTEM HAS BEEN HELD

CORONER DENIES THAT HE DID MORE THAN EXAMINE EXTERNALLY BODY OF RUCKER, WHO DIED AT MERRILL

"If one takes examination of a body by the coroner as the meaning of a post mortem examination, the way it is understood, then I can say that I made a post mortem examination of Walter Rucker. I will state again that this examination by me was merely looking over the external part of the body, and no physician assisted me, nor was Rucker examined for traces of internal injury."

This is the way Coroner Earl Whitlock accounts for the post mortem examination of the remains of the man who died suddenly at Merrill Friday, which the Northwestern stated was performed. Yesterday that paper asserted that a post mortem examination had been performed; this morning it insisted that such was the case.

"It is possible that Rucker's death was caused from fatty degeneration of the heart," continued Whitlock, "but I told a Northwestern representative that this could not be determined without a post mortem examination by a physician. I did not make a positive statement to this effect."

The remains of Rucker will leave here this afternoon for Fall River, Calif. They will be interred in the family plot there.

The cows are the gathering of a two weeks' trip through Iowa, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania, in an effort to find cows that would please Klamath farmers best.

Considerable difficulty has been encountered by Mr. McCoy in the transportation of the milchers from Twin Falls, Iowa, to Ogden, Utah, owing to blizzards and snowdrifts that blocked traffic in various places for several hours. In a telegram from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Mrs. McCoy, he stated that the cattle were standing the long trip exceptionally well.

The two carloads of cows that are due to arrive tonight makes five carloads of milchers that Mr. McCoy has brought to the Klamath Basin within three months. Those who have procured cows from Mr. McCoy are highly pleased with their purchase. It is his intention to make another trip East in the spring on a similar errand.
